Britains Rush to Quit Rumania as Nazis Pour In; Berlin Warns Hungary; U. S. in Bid to Russia Releases Tools, Permits Charter of Tankers

Moscow to Get $7,000,000 Of Embargoed Equipment

By Walter Fitzmaurice,
International News Service Staff Writer

The United States Government, courting Russia's adherence to the British-American stand against Japanese expansion in the Pacific, has released $7,000,000 of embargoed machine tools for export to Russia, it was learned last night.

In addition, the Maritime Commision has approved the charter by Russia of upward of 100,000 tons of American tankers, while disallowing any such charters by Japanese, authoritative quarters disclosed.

Orders issued in the last week by the Defense Commission's export control officer, Col. R. L. Maxwell, freed the major portion of a $10,000,000 Soviet machine tool consignment, held on the wharves at New York, San Francisco and Seattle since President Roosevelt subjected these goods to export license control on August 10.

The tools, assertedly needed sorely by Soviet heavy industries for the mechanizing of Red army divisions, are now en route to Vladivostok.

Previously Held Up

Their shipment had previously been held up on Col. Maxwell's finding, under the July 2 Licensing Act, that their conservation was necessary "in the interest of national defense."

The Maritime Commission's grant of charters for tankers ended a ban in effect against Russia from last December through August, responsible sources said.

An authoritative source said the tanker and machine tool concessions were a direct result of conversations which Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles opened with Soviet Ambassador Constantine Oumansky a month ago.

This source said the talks have put Soviet-American relations on the best footing experienced since the President gave Russia diplomatic recognition at the outset of his first term.

Troops Mass At Shanghai

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Oct. 11.—Japanese authorities made a studied attempt tonight to spike excited rumors of impending forcible occupation of Shanghai's International Settlement or French concession.

Usually well-informed quarters insisted, however, that 14,000 Chinese soldiers of the Japanese-dominated Nanking government were concentrated between Shanghai and the Woosung forts, at the mouth of the Whangpoo River, 12 miles downstream from this teeming city.

An army spokesman admitted there might have been some troop movements, but he denied that "any troops are concentrated with the idea of moving against the foreign areas."

Army and navy spokesmen joined in an official denial either that Japanese forces were building con-

Quick action by 12-year-old Vera Mae Burton probably saved the life of her 6-year-old companion, Mary Elizabeth Tylor, yesterday.

The girls were playing in their home, at 630 Independence Avenue Southwest, when flames from a gas heater ignited Mary Elizabeth's dress.

Vera Mae dashed to the kitchen, returned with a large pan of water and extinguished the flames, but only after Mary Elizabeth had been severely burned.

At Providence Hospital last night, her condition was described as serious

Strong U. S. Unlikely To Be Attacked, He Tells Akron Crowd

Aboard Presidential Special, Oct. 11.—President Roosevelt in a rear platform talk at Akron, Ohio, tonight called for a "speed-up" of defense operations.

He told 25,000 waiting at the station here he is confident "we shall avoid war through attack by somebody else on the Americas."

Calls for Speed

But he said the best way to avoid attack is to be ready to meet it, and his message to "defense towns like Akron" was "speed up all you can."

Senators Meet For 7 Minutes, Then Recess

With a handful of members on the floor, the Senate met for seven minutes yesterday and then adjourned until Monday. Although no formal agreement to refrain from bringing up controversial matters has been reached between Democrats and Republicans, Majority Leader Barkley hopes to have merely formal Monday and Thursday sessions until after the election. The Constitution forbids longer recesses without consent of both Houses.

In recess yesterday, the House will also convene Monday, when it is expected that leaders will reach agreement on formal sessions every three days.

Guns Duel Across Channel 3 Hours; English Warships Shell Cherbourg

By the Associated Press

London, Saturday, Oct. 12.—British and German heavy artillery fought a mighty engagement early today—the longest bombardment and counter-bombardment of the war—across the Dover Strait, and British planes leaped the starlit Channel to bomb the Nazi gun emplacements.

British guns opened the action last night and for the first time two German batteries on the French shore opened simultaneous fire in reply, one near the Cap Gris Nez lighthouse and the other at Calais.

Some three hours later the great duel still went on.

German guns ceased firing a short time later. (There was no word whether British guns stopped also or continued the bombardment.)

Channel, Smooth, Misty

Shells fell upon the English shore at three-minute intervals at times. The Channel itself was smooth and untroubled, bright in the moonlight but overlain by mist.

The explosions of British bombs and the quick flight of German tracer shells could be clearly seen, reddening the far horizon. Both shores were alight with gun flashes.

It was the heaviest offensive action yet undertaken by British batteries—which in the past had spoken almost always only in reply to the German guns.

Naval Guns Fire Cherbourg

It followed the admiralty's announcement of last night that the British home fleet had turned its guns on the Nazi invasion ships massed at the great French port of Cherbourg and left pillars of flame seen 40 miles away.

In announcing the bombardment of Cherbourg, the admiralty said light and heavy men o'war alike slipped through the thick mist off Cape Contentin late Thursday night, leveled their deadly barrels and pounded the ships in roadstead and port capable of sheltering hundreds of vessels and at least 50 warships of the line.

"Our salvoes were seen bursting effectively on the targets and very large fires resulted," the admiralty reported. "These were visible from our ships on their way home at a distance of 40 miles."

The Germans have large naval forces at Cherbourg, the British said, but they made no reply to the bombardment and Cherbourg's shore guns were silent until the attacking craft had come hard about and headed for home, 85 miles away.

Then they opened up, but the admiralty said "no damages or casualties were sustained."

[German sources, admitting "an attempted bombardment of Cherbourg by an enemy cruiser," said

Both Budapest And Bucharest Request Axis To Intervene

By the United Press

Berlin, Saturday, Oct. 12.—Germany early today served an implied warning to Hungary, in a statement issued by the official news agency, to beware of violating her obligations to Germany and Italy under the Axis-dominated "new European order."

The warning came a few hours after the almost simultaneous appeals of Hungary and Rumania for Axis intervention in the Balkans to settle a Hungarian-Rumanian dispute over alleged minority persecutions in Transylvania.

Rumania's allegations of Hungarian atrocities against the Rumanian minority in ceded areas of Transylvania were said in the statement of the official DNB agency to have made a "not unfavorable impression" in Berlin.

Official quarters maintained strict silence, however, regarding the appeals of Hungary and Rumania for Axis intervention under terms of the Vienna accord of last August.

Favor Rumanian Version

The official news agency in a dispatch distributed to the foreign press in Berlin, spoke kindly of a speech by Horia Sima, leader of the pro-Nazi Rumanian Iron Guard, describing alleged atrocities against the Rumanian minority in Transylvania at the hands of the Hungarians.

The breakdown in direct negotiations between Hungary and Rumania and the resultant appeals to Berlin and Rome were due to these charges and countercharges of minority persecutions.

Horia Sima's speech, the D. N. B. said, "did not make an unfavorable impression in political circles here.

"Details of the occurrences of which he complained are not known here. Thus, one is not in a position to express an opinion on it.

"Political circles in Berlin, however, are said to hold the opinion that the southeastern states must be in a position to prevent acts by bodies for which they are responsible and which are not in agreement with pledged obligations under the new European order."

Bulgarian Move Denied

Meanwhile the official DNB agency denied that any German troops had been sent to Bulgaria and branded such reports "British propaganda."

[From Belgrade it was reported that Germany was building large airdromes in Bulgaria and that hundreds of Bulgarian youths were being sent to the Reich for training as air pilots.

[The German wireless previously had reported that Bulgaria

Streetcars Need Speedometers, Judge Declares

Speedometers for streetcars were advocated by Traffic Court Judge D. Neilson yesterday after sentencing a motorman to pay a $5 fine for speeding.

The defendant, James N. Butler, 43, of 32 Todd Place Northeast was charged by Motorcycle Policeman E. E. Skinner with traveling 36 miles an hour on Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, Wednesday.

"It seems to me," Judge Neilson declared, "that streetcars should have speedometers, if not for their own protection, for the public safety. There is no way for a motorman to tell his speed. He must use his own judgment, which is only guess work."

British Freeze RumaniaFunds

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 11.—Britain has blocked all Rumanian credits in the United Kingdom because of the entrance of German troops into Rumania in an action similar to that already taken by the United States.

In itself this order did not break diplomatic relations. But it was a clear indication that such a rupture was in near prospect, and tonight it was announced that the British Minister to Bucharest, Sir

Axis Planes Roar Over Bucharest English Legation As Staff Packs

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, Oct. 11.—The British government ordered all its nationals—the army of British businessmen and experts who have kept alive British interests in Rumania—to abandon this country tonight, a few hours after packed formations of German, Italian and Rumanian planes had roared over Bucharest to symbolize the extension of Axis influence to the Black Sea.

[The United Press reported from Bucharest that, in addition to the warplane demonstration, 20,000 German "training" troops held "strategic positions" in Rumania, and that a heavily loaded German troop train had crossed the border and was due at Chitila at 10 a. m. today.]

Russia Plans Bases

[The International News Service reported from Bucharest that Soviet Russia was believed to be rushing construction of five air bases near the Rumanian frontier.

[The Soviet military airdromes being built in Bessarabia, according to this report, include a large base at Horecea, which will be capable of accommodating at least 300 warplanes.]

Marked plainly with German, Italian and Rumanian insignia, at least 200 planes roared in full-throated cry low over the British Legation where Sir Reginald Hoare, the British Minister, and his staff were packing in readiness to leave, and the warning over the Rumanian oil centers of Ploesti and Giurgiu, where British and French interests once were dominant.

The British called it an "intimidation" raid.

Within a few hours London instructed the legation to remove immediately all nationals from Rumania.

Berlin, Oct. 11.—The regular semi-annual review of Russian-German economic relations will be made the occasion for broader conversations between the two governments in Moscow soon, it is announced.

Minister Karl Schnurre, expert on economic questions relative to Russia in the German foreign office who laid the groundwork for the Russo-German trade agreement of August 19, 1940, is already in Moscow.

It may be assumed also, informed quarters declare, that the question of German economic intercourse with the Baltic and Bessarabian territories annexed by Russian will be included on the agenda for these discussions.

Although it cannot be confirmed it would not be surprising if Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, were also to go to Moscow shortly. For there has not been any personal contact between the Russian and German leaders since the signing of the tripartite Axis military, economic

Each potential trainee will then be given a personal interview—in as great privacy as circumstances permit.

Form Is Described As Simpler, Better Than That of 1917

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Selective service headquarters made public last night the questionnaire to be filled out by men called for military service and estimated that about 2,500,000 of the 16,500,000 men who must register next Wednesday will have to answer its 60 odd questions during the next year.

The eight-page document, only half the length of the questionnaire used during the World War, was described by Frederick Osborne, chairman of the President's advisory committee on selective service, as "simpler and better" than the 1917 form. The principal difference is that registrants are not required to claim or waive their right to exemption from service.

"We feel it is not fair nor within the spirit of the act to ask a man if he does or does not claim deferment," Osborne said. "In the World War men who did not ask exemp-

Walls of Kennedy Home Shake As Bomb Hits Nearby Cottage

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), Oct. 12.—The "raiders passed" signal sounded in London around 2:30 a. m., today much earlier than usual, following a series of night attacks in which German airmen, slipping in stealthily with motors throttled down for long glides, bombed 35 London areas.

The Nazis stabbed viciously and repeatedly before calling it a night but the Press Association said only a few succeeded in penetrating deeply into the city.

"The raiders that did get through were even more random than usual in their attacks," the news agency said.

It was disclosed, meanwhile, that several cottages were destroyed early yesterday on an estate near the country home of United States Ambassador Joseph Kennedy.

Ambassador Kennedy was in bed at the time and was uninjured. The walls of his house trembled and lampshades fell across the bed.

This was the second close call for the Ambassador. Late in August a bomb fell 300 yards from the house, and recently a Nazi airplane shot down by the British narrowly missed his home in falling.

Bomb Blasts a Romance

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Shapely Lydia Cecily Hill, 27-year-old showgirl upon whom the fabulously wealthy Sultan of Johore showered jewels inscribed "With all my love," was killed today in the German air raid on Canterbury.

Miss Hill was in a Canterbury shop trying on a fur coat when a bomb demolished the smart establishment.

She long had been a stage favorite but gave up her career after she met the Sultan and moved into a palatial home at Mayfair Court, Herne Bay.

The 67-year-old potentate, who rules a principality on the Malay Peninsula, broke down when informed of her death.

Miss Hill, a West End glamour girl, made a world tour as his guest.

At Singapore, in 1938, the Sultan turned down an invitation to attend a government house celebration of the King's birthday and took her to see the movie, "Her Jungle Lover," instead.

The Sultan, a free spender who shuns the spotlight, parted $2,500,000 off his bankroll several years ago and contributed it toward construction of Britain's great naval base at Singapore.

Britons Rush Flight From Rumania

London Orders All To Leave as Crisis In Balkans Deepens of Constanta for Istanbul on Monday.

It seemed likely severance of diplomatic relations between Britain and Rumania was a matter of hours.

Some members of the legation staff will leave tomorrow, but it was indicated that no final announcement of rupture in Anglo-Rumanian relations would be made until the last Briton has left.

The Rumanian government, meanwhile, was drawing up a special communique, announcing for the first time—officially—that the German military had arrived "to act only as instructors to the Rumanian army."

Truckloads of baggage of German aviators arrived at one hotel opposite the royal palace where two floors had been reserved for 45 German officers, and an entire floor and other quarters were arranged for other high-ranking German officers—indicating German military plans in Rumania are extensive.

The flights over the oil centers underscored a charge published in the German mouthpiece here, the Tageblatt, that Britain had assigned to Turkey the task of destroying Rumania's oil wells by aerial attack, and that the British minister was implicated in the plot.

The Turkish press openly expressed the fear Germany was launching a 1,600-mile pincer movement against the Suez Canal to support Italy's drive from the other direction from Libya.

The Turks hoped lack of cooperation from Soviet Russia, however, would stay the German hand.

According to the Turkish-British alliance, said the Tageblatt, Rumania's natural resources were to have been "destroyed without mercy."

Elsewhere, uneasiness was extending through southeastern Europe. There were reports of increasing pressure against Yugoslavia and of stepped up Axis shipments of munitions to Bulgaria.

[From Budapest, the Greek army was reported making steady preparations for any development.

[Hungarian students shouting "down with Bucharest" staged Budapest demonstrations which coincided with appeals by both Rumania and Hungary to the Axis to settle disputes over details growing out of Hungary's occupation of northern Transylvania.

An Iron Guardist commissar took over control of the American-owned Rumanian Telephone Co. today and announced Iron Guard understudies would be selected to take over eventually all of the most important executive posts.

The commissar for the telephone company was named under the government's announced program to place all foreign-owned companies in the hands of Iron Guard directors.

In another move to "Rumanianize" the country completely, the government was reported considering a plan to establish two Iron Guard controlled newspapers and suspend all others here.

London Freezes Rumanian Cash

Reginald Hoare had notified Premier Ion Antonescu that British-Rumanian relations had reached a "critical point."

[The United Press reported from London that the British ambassador in Bucharest had been authorized to "break off diplomatic relations at any moment he deems advisable."]

Ships' Status in Doubt

Whether Rumanian ships now in British ports are to be included in the order freezing Rumanian assets was not stated. What it means, in effect, is that no Rumanian bank account, no Rumanian-owned gold or other liquid assets may be used to buy anything or be exchanged for British money.

The authorized statement of Sir Reginald's interview with Antonescu asserted there was reason to believe that Rumania had made an agreement with the German government even before the Antonescu group came to power upon King Carol's abdication for the dispatch to Rumania of Nazi armored divisions.

It added that the Rumanian government had made "contradictory statements" as to the arrival of German troops in Rumania, and that Sir Reginald's telegrams to his home government had been "held up."

Sir Reginald, the statement went on, was able to see the Rumanian foreign minister on October 9 only after "persistent requests," and he was told then that "a very large number" of German "instructions" were "expected forthwith."

Nevertheless, it was declared here, the minister on the same day "categorically" was told by Antonescu himself that "there were no German troops in Rumania," although 3,000 German "specialists, instructors or technicians" were expected.

Sir Reginald also was said to have made "most vigorous protests" against the arrest and asserted ill-treatment of British subjects employed in Rumanian oil companies, and it was added that Britain now believed "the arrested persons are no longer in danger or discomfort."

Recall Is Demanded

Sections of the London press demanded Sir Reginald's recall—an act which would break off diplomatic relations with Rumania.

During the day, Dimitri Dimancescu, counsellor to the Rumanian Legation in London, quit his post and was thus quoted by the British Press Association:

"I should never for a single moment allow myself to be associated with the present Rumanian government—a government which has surrendered to a foreign power."

Norwegians Nazi Serfs, Legation Here Says

The Norwegian Legation said yesterday it had heard from Oslo that the "Nazi rulers of Norway" have imposed a state of serfdom, including a rule that "no farmer may from now on go to the city without special permission from the authorities."

The legation added: "'Unemployed' Norwegians will be transferred to Germany, thus sharing the fate that has already come to Polish laborers."

Tokyo Denies Treaty Has Put Its Policy in Hitler's Hands

Japan Free to Decide What Constitutes An Attack on Member of Alliance Diplomatic Spokesman Points Out

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Oct. 11.—"Japan has not committed its destiny into Hitler's hands. We are still masters of our policy. We have always prized our diplomatic autonomy and we have it still."

This statement was the focal point of an hour's conversation today with a Japanese diplomatic official fully qualified to explain the government's viewpoint. When it was pointed out that those emphatic words did not seem to square with article 3 of the German-Italian-Japanese accord, the official pointed out the word "attacked" and said that Japan remained the master in deciding what constituted an attack. He continued:

"Criticism has been made that the treaty would in certain circumstances place control of Japan's policy in the hands of other than the Japanese government. It has been suggested that in case American assistance to Britain becomes more pronounced Germany will represent it as a form of attack and demand action under article 3. But such interpretation presupposes that we have surrendered our autonomy in foreign policy. We have not done so. It is for the Japanese government to decide what brings the treaty into operation."

The evident implication of this official explanation is that there exists besides the published text some schedule or protocol allowing Japan considerable liberty of interpretation.

Ships to Britain Halted

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Japanese ships have been ordered to stop calling at English ports, officers of the liner Hakozaki Maru said today when the vessel arrived with 5,600 tons of cargo loaded last July in Kobe, Japan, for delivery in Liverpool.

The liner carried the cargo across the Indian Ocean, around Africa and almost to England before being ordered to put into Lisbon, Portugal, where she tied up 28 days.

Leaving London

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—Most of the staff members of four Japanese banks and two large business firms in London will leave for home in a fortnight on advice of the Japanese Foreign Office, a spokesman at the Japanese Embassy said today.

"Business has been dwindling for some time," he added, "and the branches of some of the smaller firms already are closed."

Selective Service Queries Published

tion went almost automatically into class I. This way is true selective service, leaving it up to the local board to say where he shall serve, at home or in the Army."

The questionnaire delves into such subjects as the man's physical condition, education, occupation, dependents, income and court record. From the answers given, local boards determine whether he is to be called for immediate service or should be deferred because of dependency, is unfit or not desired, or because his services are necessary in his civilian capacity.

Questions as to physical fitness, income, property, and criminal record, if any, are confidential and for the information only of specified selective service officials.

Under the regulations, none of the questionnaires will be sent out until after the national lottery which is expected to be on some day between October 21 and 26. The lottery will determine the order in which men will be called, and the questionnaires will be mailed out to the highest on the list at a rate of less than 50 a week for each area.

Statement Optional

Osborne said selective service headquarters did not want to classify any more men than necessary to fill the Army's expected call of 800,000 men the first year. Each local board will mail questionnaires to about 250 men this winter and a like number next spring.

While the form contains no entry for claiming or waiving deferment, the man may make a statement as to what he thinks his classification should be. The making of such a statement, however, is optional. When the board classifies him according to the information given, the man may appeal.

Earlier in the day, officials announced that registration machinery was ready to operate throughout the Nation. More than 1,000,000 registrars have been named to serve in 125,000 registration places, it was said.

Must Be Sworn To

The queries put in the questionnaire are grouped in 13 series and must be sworn to. Major points of information requested are as follows:

Series 1. Your name (including any aliases), address, telephone number, and Social Security number.

Series 2 (confidential). Your physical condition and whether you are an inmate of any institution. (Claimed physical defects must be detailed.)

Series 3. Your education.

Series 4. What kind of work you do, how long you have done this work and your pay, and who your employer is. If you are unemployed, what work you are trained to do.

Series 5. What kind of work you have done in the last five years other than your present occupation.

Series 6. This is for farm workers only and asks whether you are a farm owner, hired man, or share cropper; how long you have farmed and the principal products of your farm.

Series 7 (confidential). Your marital status, and whether you have any dependents. If married, you must tell when and where you were married. All dependents must be listed and, if there are persons partially dependent upon you, details must be given of how much support they receive from you.

This section also asks: How much income you earn by working, what other income you have, what property you have other than personal and household effects, how much money you have if more than $500, whether you own or rent your house, and if a renter how much rent you pay and who is your landlord.

Series 8—This is for ministers of religion and ministry students only. Ministers are asked whether they customarily serve as a minister and, if so, where; also where, when and by whom they were ordained. Ministry students are required simply to state what theological or divinity school they are attending.

Series 9—When and where you were born, your race and whether you are a citizen. Aliens must give their nationality, tell whether they are seeking citizenship and supply their registration number under the Alien Registration Act, if it has been received.

Objections to War

Series 10—Whether you have any conscientious objections to war and, if so, whether you object to noncombatant military service.

Series 11 (confidential). Whether you have ever been convicted of treason or a felony. Those who have must tell when, where and the nature of the offense.

Series 12 (confidential). Whether you have had any military experience. If you have, the details, whether you were honorably discharged, and, if not, why.

Series 13. This section applies only to groups specifically deferred by law, such as college students, certain governmental officials and members of Government services who are mentioned in the act. They are asked to state their office or rank. College students who can ask deferment until after the end of the present school year, are asked the name of their college and the course taken.

the attacker was "driven away" by fire from ashore.]

British planes directed the fire at Cherbourg, but that was only an incident in the Royal Air Force's night of counterattacking.

Bombers attacked from the Channel and North Sea shores, opposite Britain, to Kiel, Wilhelmshaven and Amsterdam and were reported to have devastated oil stores at Hanover, Cologne and half a dozen other points in western Germany.

Summing up this series of blows at German fuel stores, the air ministry said seven plants with a combined annual output capacity of nearly 1,500,000 metric tons were attacked.

These centers, it was added, were "singled out for concerted operations. Widespread damage was believed to have been caused to oil stores of vital importance to the German war machine."

[German accounts of the British counterattacks, although denying there was military damage, plainly confirmed the scope of the raids. The Germans said at least a score of persons were killed in Germany and 18 at Amsterdam; acknowledged the port of Hamburg was badly hit; asserted 13 houses in a Cologne suburb were damaged; said a hospital and a medical institute were damaged at Leipzig and listed among other raided cities Duesseldorf, Magdeburg and Essen, where the big Krupp arms works are situated.]

The British air ministry said that the Krupp shipyards at Kiel were bombed heavily and docks set afire; that the Fokker plane plant at Amsterdam again was attacked, along with other factories and railways in the German-occupied Netherlands; that several bomb salvoes were planted at Wilhemshaven.

Germany's North Sea seaplane base at Norderney and German shipping all along the Dutch-French-Belgian coast got their usual strafing.

to the registrant's home and business address, and the person through whom he can be reached in emergencies. If he has difficulty answering, he will be advised by the official.

It is the latter who does the actual work of filling out the card. The only writing required of the registrant is the signing of his name. The process, it is thought, should take only 15 minutes of the candidate's time.

To prepare the 7,100 registrars for their duties (which, it is emphasized, will be administered with the utmost courtesy and tact) special instruction will be given the volunteer-employes Monday.

Present at the classes will be notaries public to swear in registrars en masse at 4 and 8 p. m. at Langley Junior High School, and Coolidge, Eastern, and Wilson High Schools. Colored registrants will meet at the same time at Armstrong High School.

Board Members Sworn In

Special classes for policemen and firemen who will serve at registration places will be held at Central High School at 2 p. m. About 300 fire fighters will act as registrars, Holmes said. Many entire engine and truck companies volunteered in response to his appeal. No figures were available yesterday on the law enforcement officers.

As selective service officials awaited White House approval of 24 Government agents and 24 physicians who will serve in advisory capacities in each selection area, Gen. Cox swore in scores of local board members at the National Guard Armory.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Holcomb, Marine Corps commandant, yesterday granted permission to all Marine Reserve battalions to recruit up to 20 per cent of their authorized strength. The men enlisting must have served at least one year in the Marines, Army or Navy.

Tent Crowded

Col. Harvey L. Miller, commander of the local Fifth Marine Reserve Battalion, announced the recruiting office, 458 Indiana Avenue Northwest, would be kept open every night next week to interview applicants.

Increasing numbers of selectionage men crowded the Selective Service Information Tent throughout the day, seeking registration information as Wednesday's registration approached.

Gen. Cox last night denied reports that he will be replaced as selective service executive here.

It has been said the general would relinquish the post on being mobilized with the National Guard early in January.

Only a fortnight ago thieves made off with £5,000 ($20,000) worth of jewelry from her home. Two of the pieces were inscribed "I. S." (The sultan's name is Ibrahim.)

The Sultan and Miss Hill always denied rumors they were engaged, although at one time there were reports of a crisis in Johore and a possible abdication.

The Sultan's most recent appearance in the public print was in July when a Canadian lumberman met him in an air raid shelter.

"I'm the Sultan of Johore," said the tall ruler.

"Oh yeah, I'm the King of Ireland," countered the Canadian.

Bucharest, Saturday, Oct. 12.—Quarreling Rumania and Hungary appealed to the Rome-Berlin Axis tonight to step in and preserve Balkan peace.

Hungary Faces Shake-Up

There was speculation early today that the new government of Gen. Ion Antonescu, who has assumed leadership of Rumania's Iron Guardists, may be using the Transylvanian quarrel as an opportunity to regain part of the territory now that Rumania has swung solidly to the side of the Axis.

These quarters foresaw possible German pressure aimed at forcing a government shake-up in Hungary.

If the Iron Guard should succeed in recovering at least a part of Transylvania, it was argued, it would tend to eliminate discontent in connection with the German military activity in Rumania.

There were strong indications that many of the Nazis filtering into Rumania had gone by way of Transylvania, entering the territory in disguise along with the in-marching Hungarians.

[A report from Bucharest stated that Hungary is said to have opened her frontiers to German troops en route to Rumania.]

Mixed Commission Fails

The Hungarian government appealed to Germany and Italy after receiving a memorandum from Valeri Pop, head of the Rumanian delegation on the mixed commission set up to carry out the terms of the Vienna award.

Pop suggested the naming of a mixed committee to investigate the minority complaints and allegations. His request was rejected, however, by Budapest.

Earlier in the day, newspapers had said that the Hungarian-Rumanian mixed commission had broken off negotiations. Pop, it was said, returned to Bucharest last Saturday.

and Syria would meet with "very strong resistance."

"If it is the Germans' intention to penetrate Egypt in this direction they surely know this road is not easy, but on the contrary is very difficult," the official Turkish radio said in the military section of the evening news broadcast compiled by the general staff of the Turkish army, navy and air force.

"This road across Anatolia is guarded by 2,000,000 bayonets. Such a move on Germany's part would create many political complications and meet with very strong resistance."

The radio, making the first official comment on the dispatch of German forces into Rumania, added: "It seems the Balkans, and even Soviet Russia, are on the brink of unexpected war. It is best to see what the next two weeks will bring. Let us wait."

It gave three possible explanations of the German advance into the Balkan kingdom:

"One—to protect Rumania's oil fields from all possible attacks by neighbors or by the British Mediterranean air force. This is not sufficient reason to explain such drastic action.

"Two—To assist in the occupation of Egypt. The Italian army has learned that an advance beyond Sidi Barrani is extremely difficult and maybe Germany has judged it necessary to advance across the Balkans, across Anatolia into Syria and Egypt.

"Three—to assist in the occupation of Egypt by occupying Greece, which would bring Germany to the Mediterranean. However, supposing Greece is occupied, it still would be impossible to get a land force to Egypt because the Axis does not dominate the Mediterranean."

Turks Shown Nazi War Films

The broadcast was made several hours after Premier Refik Saydam received the new Soviet Ambassador, Sergei Vinogradoff.

The German Embassy at Istanbul, where Ambassador Franz von Papen is now staying, entertained Turkish officials and the diplomatic corps tonight with a series of German war films illustrating Nazi victories.

Privately, some diplomats recalled that the Germans showed movies of their Polish campaign in Oslo a few days before the invasion of Norway.

the troubled foreign situation included these:

Legislation which will permit, among other things, the taking over of from 200 to 300 fighting planes ordered by Sweden, and, presumably, their delivery to Great Britain, was signed by President Roosevelt.

Nineteen cargo ships from its laid-up fleet were sold to British buyers by the Maritime Commission. They will bolster the British merchant marine which has suffered heavy losses in the war.

Because of the "present importance of Egypt in the international situation," Maj. Bonner F. Fellers was transferred by the War Department to Cairo as military attache. He is now serving in a similar capacity in Spain.

Siam Cautioned

At Bangkok, Thailand (Siam), United States Minister Hugh Grant reminded the Thailand government that this Government wants the status quo maintained in the Far East. His reminder was prompted by territorial demands by the Thailand government in French Indo-China, demands attributed in some circles to Japanese urgings. It was given about the same time this country was stopping, at Manila, a shipment of ten military planes on their way from American factories to Thailand.

The War Department announced that a second group of Latin-American army officers, guests of Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall, will leave the Capital next Wednesday on a tour of United States Army posts and industrial plants. Representing 11 countries, 23 officers will make the trip. The first group, now inspecting American defenses, is scheduled to return to Washington on the same day the second contingent departs.

Big Gun Tools Included

New York, Oct. 11 (INS).—Among the machine tool equipment intended for Russia, but held up several months ago just as they were about to be shipped from here, were a number of the finest precision tools for building giant artillery guns of long-range and tremendous fire power, it was revealed here tonight.

These instruments, especially those for boring the barrels of cannon with the most detailed precision, had taken nearly two years to complete. Whether these will be included among the instruments to be sent to Russia could not be learned here.

Japanese Navy on Parade

Tokyo (Saturday), Oct. 12 (AP).—The finest units of Japan's navy paraded off Yokohama yesterday before Emperor Hirohito—a feature of this year of celebration of 26 centuries of the Japanese Empire's history, according to the orthodox Japanese version.

More than 100 warships, including a number of battleships, and 250 planes participated as the Emperor watched from aboard the imperial flagship Hiyei with the admiral of the fleet, Prince Hiroyasu Fushimi, and other high officials and members of the imperial family.

A radio broadcast by Domei, Japanese news agency, apparently referring to relations with the United States, said that "great importance must be attached to this naval demonstration at the present moment."

and political accord, and it is no secret that the Reich would like to see closer relations, as an example, in the form of a nonaggression pact between Moscow and Tokyo.

Regular economic and political contact between Russia and the Reich are one of the bases of their relations, it is emphasized here. When, in light of this contact, it is added in informed quarters locally, a balance is drawn in Berlin, the relative present position of Moscow is then an objective thereof and this obviously is the answer to the question frequently posed in Anglo-Saxon lands as to whether the moment has come for Russia to alter the direction of her policy.

Germany's opponents, it is said like to believe that such a change in Russian policy has taken place. The reasons they give, informed quarters here add, are that Russia's real interests are anti-Japanese, and at odds with those of the Axis powers, because the latter will control the maritime exits of the Soviet Union, that unbridgeable ideological differences exist between the U. S. S. R. and the Axis powers, and that there is an insurmountable Russo-German antagonism in the north and the Balkans.

Should German troops occupy the regions in which Rumanian oil wells are situated, the British would be quite justified under international law for bombing those oil wells if they could, according to an opinion uttered by authoritative quarters in the Reich's Capital in response to a query this afternoon. The official and final opinion on this question, however, these quarters added, would have to be given by the legal department of the German foreign office.

'Puppet Mayor' Slain in Shanghai

centration camps in which to intern foreigners or were "planning to take over the settlement or the French concession by force October 18 after the Burma Road reopens."

This channel of imports and exports of the Central Chinese Government, with which Japan has been at war for 39 months, is scheduled to be reopened by Britain October 17.

The Navy spokesman declared that "very definitely both are wild rumors and nothing more. They probably were originated by certain individuals desiring to aggravate Japanese-United States relations."

Shanghai's rumor crop, started Tuesday when the United States Department suggested that Americans leave the Orient, flowered in the excitement following the cleaver-assassination of Japan's puppet Chinese mayor for occupied parts of Shanghai.

The Japanese spokesmen refused to comment on the case of Mayor Fu Siao-en, one of the most heavily guarded men in the Orient, who was hacked to death as he slept, early today in his Hongkew residence.

Soldiers and gendarmes, encouraged by an offer from the Fu family of rewards for the arrest and information leading to the arrest of the assassin, turned the Japanese-controlled Hongkew section inside out in the search.

Reliable Japanese sources said one of Fu's trusted servants slipped into his bedroom, struck him three blows with a heavy meat knife without awakening Mrs. Fu or two Japanese and two Russian bodyguards in nearby rooms and then slipped through the outside guard, with word that the mayor was asleep, and escaped on a bicycle.

Despite the rumors, Americans here showed increasing disinclination to heed the State Department's suggestion to leave the Orient.

Castle.

In London early this morning, one high explosive bomb wrecked a church and damaged Y. M. C. A. property, the British Press Association reported.

Eight German aircraft were downed up to midnight, the air ministry reported. Nine British planes were lost, but six pilots were safe.

German raiders were active from the Scottish Highlands in the north to the Welsh Mountains in the west and the much-bombed southeastern coastal area.

Three heavy bombs sacked down in one London area just after midnight, leaving clouds of debris.

One gas main burst and one man was killed when caught in the street. Firemen fought flames started by incendiaries.

A group of German Dorniers attempted to attack Liverpool, but were intercepted by British fighter planes who shot down three of them over Wales, the air ministry announced.

Four bombs fell in northeast Scotland in open country before British fighters chased the raiders out to sea.

London Day Raids

Fires started by incendiary bombs in a southeast town quickly were controlled by firemen, it was said. Explosives also rained on the town, demolishing workers' cottages.

Concussion from nearby explosions ripped out the war-time windows of Ancient Canterbury Cathedral yesterday as Nazi planes made six asaults on London and the southeastern area between dawn and dinner time.

The day was one of spectacular combats in and out of the cloud banks of the Kentish Coast and the outskirts of London and an extraordinarily effective defense was claimed by the air ministry in beating off a half dozen Nazi thrusts.

Most of the raiders were bomb and cannop-bearing fighter planes, the ministry said, without mentioning unofficial speculations that this indicated a shortage of Nazi bomber craft, and not a single instance of "heavy bombing" was reported during the day.

Some bombs did fall, however, it was officially stated, not alone in the town of Canterbury—where stores and homes were damaged—but in Kent, in Sussex and near the Thames Estuary.

In the Cathedral at Canterbury—seat of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the primate of all England—the only destruction wrought was to the relatively valueless windows which, soon after the war's outbreak, replaced the priceless vistas of stained glass which for seven centuries had let in the mellow light to the most historic of all the churches of England.

The Cathedral, where St. Thomas a'Becket was slain and buried and about which Chaucer wrote—the place of penance of the old English Kings—suffered no structural harm.

'Speed Up Defense,' Roosevelt Urges

Strong U. S. Won't Be Attacked, He Tells Akron Crowd

major address tomorrow night, President Roosevelt was doubling back on the trail traveled by Wendell Willkie through doubtful Pennsylvania and uncertain Ohio.

Through 20 miles of cheering Pittsburgh and 5 miles of street jammed Youngstown, the President had motored to inspect defense in his trip, billed "nonpolitical."

Willkie had attacked defense program handling, had charged unneeded delay and accused the President of edging toward war in his tour of these parts. The President in his brief pause at Akron promised speed and voiced assurance against war.

But neither at Pittsburgh nor in Akron, was any effort made to conceal the campaign flavor. Third-term Democrats rode with the President at every stop. Bands blared through bannered and Roosevelt-placarded streets. Spots chosen had been toured by Willkie.

Crowds Outnumber Willkie's

Crowds far outnumbering the Willkie turnout a week ago gave the President a hand in the Pittsburgh industrial sectors. The downtown welcome equaled Willkie's in numbers if not in noise. State employes were released for the day and schools were not in session.

At Youngstown, where Willkie made one early morning speech ten days ago, thousands overflowing the street broke through police lines and crowded the President's car.

President Roosevelt viewed flood-control projects, inspected steel and machine plants and dedicated the 100,000th low-cost housing unit.

It was at the Terrace Village project in a former slum section of Pittsburgh that the President made his first speech of the day, awarding a medal to Mr. and Mrs. Lester Churchfield, "house warming" the 100,000th home of the USHA.

This stop also the President tied into his defense "inspections" by telling some 20,000 gathered there that jobs and homes are part of the program of defense.

"As long as they (the people) know that their Government is sympathetically working to protect their jobs and to better their homes, we can be confident that if the need arises, the people themselves will wholeheartedly join in the defense of their homes and the defense of their democracy," Mr. Roosevelt said.

From early morning at Johnstown, Pa., where Senator Guffey, of Pennsylvania, and National Committeeman David L. Lawrence boarded the train arm in arm, political leaders constituted a large part of the President's entourage. To preserve the nonpolitical color, local Republicans were invited, too, but it was Guffey, also seeking re-election, and the Democratic Mayor who rode with the President in his car through Pittsburgh. Five Democratic Congressmen boarded the train.

Guffey, Lawrence Make Up

A by-product of the trip was a harmony declaration by Guffey and Lawrence who rowed and broke up in the last spring primary.

Joining the party before the train entered Ohio were Charles Sawyer, Democratic National Committeeman and third-term leader, and Representative Kirwan, of Ohio, who says he is not only for a third term "but a fourth and fifth." Representative Harter, of Ohio, at whose request the President added the Akron stop, boarded the train at Youngstown.

Pittsburgh, where Mr. Roosevelt left the train to inspect the Homestead Steel Works and the Mesta Machine Co. plant, is the mainstay of Democratic Allegheny County, which gave the President a 147,000 majority in 1936.

There were several "we want Willkie" shouts as the White House party left the East Liberty Station on the Pittsburgh tour. The crowds thickened and the cheers increased as the party neared Homestead, scene of "the bloody Homestead riots" of the nineties, motored through the Carnegie-Illinois plant, and moved on to the Mesta works.

From the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee headquarters, C. I. O., a loud-speaker blared: "Roosevelt for a third term and a thirty-third." Placards like "100 per cent for Roosevelt" and "God blessed America with Roosevelt," were raised in the crowds.

Remaining in his car, the President was escorted through Homestead plant driveways lined with exhibits of 509,000-pound armor ingots, 240,000-pound side armor plates, huge mold castings, and the largest steel beam in the country, 86 feet long and weighing 25,800 pounds.

Workers clustered in little groups cheered as his car approached. At one point the President seemed to be speaking to them. A reporter asked a worker if he spoke. "Yes," he replied, "he said 'Hello,' and I said 'Hello, Frank.'"

On through the mill town of Munhall, the President moved to the Mesta Machine plant, viewing here the progress made in 43 days since the War Department authorized expansion of Mesta facilities for manufacturing guns for the Army and armor plate for the Navy.

Again workers cheered as he passed, a contrast to Willkie's reception nearby. If campaigning, the President was following a strategy the reverse of Willkie's. He was concentrating on the industrial districts where he is most popular. Willkie has been working on the same districts, knowing they are predominantly hostile, but seeking to cut down the Roosevelt edge in such sectors. He avoids middle-class sections. One local Republican leader said Willkie made "some indentation" on his tour here last week. "Anybody for Willkie?" a reporter shouted to one group of Mesta workers. "Two," a workman grinned back. In another group one similarly queried replied "lots of them." Another waved his hand and said, "Naw."

"And if democracy falls in America it will perish from the earth. But if we elect a responsible Government, I believe—and I know—that democracy will be saved."

Declaring that "the candidate for the third term has chosen this most critical time to violate one of our oldest traditions," Willkie continued:

"And what reason does he give for this? Does he tell you that there are more jobs than there were four years ago?

"Oh, no. He says that Hitler and Mussolini would like to see him defeated in this coming November. . . . He hints at it. He insinuates it. He leaves the real job to his hand-picked candidate for Vice President and his hand-picked Governor of New York.

"Dragging the European war into our domestic relations is not a responsible act. It is a reckless one.

"Do you care what Hitler thinks or what Mussolini thinks?

"Are you going to take either of these gentlemen into the voting booth with you next November?

"No one in America has any use for these men except the third term candidate. He thinks they can win for him."

The candiate argued that the Administration campaign would cause embarrassment to "millions of Italian-American citizens."

"They have a right to vote just like anybody else," he continued. "But they don't want to vote on European issues. They want to vote on American issues."

Condemns President's Tour

Earlier, Willkie declared that President Roosevelt's current trip into the Midwest was in "contravention" of the Hatch Act and the Corrupt Practices Act.

Climaxing a day of fast campaigning by automobile through southeastern Massachusetts, a heavily industrialized area, Willkie climbed the steps of the City Hall in Lynn to make his statement that the President's journey was "political."

"I make a very serious charge about that kind of thing," he said, declaring that a "substantial proportion" of the cost of the trip was paid by the taxpayers "in contravention of the Hatch Act and the Corrupt Practices Act."

A few minutes earlier, in Harvard Square in Cambridge, before a crowd made up mainly of Harvard University students, Willkie referred to the same subject in saying the "candidate for the third term" had left Washington on "an ostensible military inspection trip."

"I notice by the noon papers," he said, "that his train, paid for at public expense, is to stop at Johnstown, Pa., and take aboard the Democratic candidate for Senator and other Democratic leaders.

"That is no military inspection trip."

He told the student crowd, which booed at every reference to the President, that he considered this was "playing politics with the defense of the United States."

Earlier, before coming back to a crowded and confetti-strewn reception in downtown Boston, Willkie declared again and again in impromptu speeches that the New Deal was trying to divide the Nation into classes, while he was fighting for national unity.

He kept his talks brief, but he repeatedly emphasized three contentions:

The Nation must build a powerful defense to protect itself against danger from without.

Domestic economy must be made prosperous to assure continuance of democracy at home.

The country must be unified and must cooperate in working out national problems.

"Policy to Divide and Rule"

"The policy of the New Deal has been to divide and rule," the candidate told an applauding crowd at Fall River. "It has pitted class against class and section against section. In spending your money, it has favored other sections of the country at your expense.

"And it does this not to promote industrial production, but to promote political profit."

Willkie was cheered loudly during brief stops in New Bradford, Fall River, Taunton and historic Quincy, home of John Adams.

When he entered the Dorchester section of Boston, boos intermingled with applause and, at one point, someone threw a soft piece of fruit. The nominee brushed it from his coat, peered for a moment into the crowd and then continued waving to spectators.

As on earlier days, Mrs. Willkie was showered with flowers. Bouquets were banked high in the nominee's car. Trailing behind were colored paper streamers, thrown by applauding crowds.

Traveling with Willkie were Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., House minority leader and chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Declare War Immediately, Standley Asks

Admiral Declares It Is Time for U. S. 'To Get War-Minded'

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 11.—An "immediate declaration of war" against the Axis powers, or the declaration of a national emergency, was urged today by Admiral William H. Standley, retired.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of the Young Men's Board of Trade, the former Chief of Naval Operations told his audience that "You fellows have got to get war-minded.

He said this country was in "about the same situation as France before it fell" and that "we are mentally unprepared for war." At the same time he criticized the stand of "2,000,000 American mothers who pledged their undying opposition to sending our boys to fight on a foreign soil."

He asserted when the time comes to defend our own country "it will be just too damn late."

"My contention is that an immediate declaration of war or, lacking that, the granting of full emergency powers to the President by Congress is the only way that our democracy can meet the present emergency," Standley said.

"I don't care whether it's Roosevelt, Jones or Smith," he added, "I think that's the only way to avoid a dictatorship."

Arlington Woman 'Out of the Money' In Racing Scheme

Winona, Minn., Oct. 11 (AP).—Federal and State authorities today sought three men Miss Charlotte Womack, of Arlington, Va., said had fleeced her of $2,000 in a horse race swindle.

She signed complaints after telling Sheriff Ben Zimmerman she couldn't understand "how I was so dumb as to let them do it."

Miss Womack said she met the trio while she was a Mayo Clinic patient in Rochester, Minn. One of them showed her a bag he said contained tickets calling for $52,000 winnings in horse race wagers, but said he could not collect until he could produce $21,000 cash bond to prove he could have paid off if he lost.

Miss Womack said she made a trip back to Arlington for the $2,000 and gave it to the men in a hotel here. Later she was told the man had lost $22,000 in an unfortunate transaction and the men disappeared.

Miss Womack said she was promised a share in the "winnings" for aiding in arranging the "bond."

The Gallup Poll

Property Owners Found Leaning to Willkie By 53 to 47 in National Survey

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 12.—If voting in a Presidential election were to be limited to owners of property—as Alexander Hamilton and the old Federalist Party once advocated—Wendell L. Willkie would almost certainly be the next President of the United States, a Nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates today.

As it is, Mr. Willkie's problem appers to be to increase his appeal among the great mass of American voters—numbering approximately half of the total voting population—who do not own homes, property or securities.

These voters, many of them propertyless farmers and plant and factory workers, are about 2 to 1 for the reelection of President Roosevelt, the survey shows.

Voters were asked which candidate they favored and whether they personally owned homes or other property. The choices of those with opinions in both groups were as follows:

	Roosevelt	Willkie
Property owners	47%	53%
Nonowners	67	33

Approximately one person in ten in each group said that he was undecided or without an opinion on the candidates as yet.

Ever since 1935 Institute surveys have shown that the Republican Party has its greatest core of strength with voters in the upper income groups, while the Democrats are strongest among voters in the lower income brackets.

But while the present survey also underlines the political cleavage between the "haves" and "have-nots," it is interesting to note that neither candidate has anything like a monopoly of the vote in any one property level.

Political observers may be surprised to find that President Roosevelt is receiving as much as 47 per cent of the vote of property owners, and, conversely, that Wendell Willkie receives one vote out of every three among nonproperty owners.

Archbishop Curley Is 61 Today; Will Broadcast Views

Baltimore, Oct. 11 (AP).—The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, will be 61 tomorrow, but he plans no celebration.

"People put too much emphasis on birthdays," he said in an interview today. "It's not the day you are born that counts, but the day you die. That's the important day and the one I'm concerned about."

The archbishop said that "internal conditions of our country are not in such a state of preparedness as I would like to see them."

"I refer," he said, "to the evils of lack of respect for law and order in our Nation, to the curse of divorce that is directed against the very foundation of society, to birth control that is approved by the First Lady of the land as not against her religion, but which is against the fundamental law of nature and is known as wrong to my old friends the Seminole Indians of Florida, who are pagans today."

The archbishop, who has received hundreds of congratulatory messages from all over the country, has prepared a special message touching upon world conditions which will be broadcast tomorrow night in Washington.

Justice Gordon Plans to Retire In a Few Weeks

Justice Peyton Gordon will retire from the District Court bench in a few weeks, The Post learned last night.

Justice Gordon suffered an attack of coronary thrombosis two weeks before his seventieth birthday on April 30 and for a time his condition was critical.

After a six months illness, the justice returned to his post at the opening of the autumn term of the court. He has presided over several trials, but the work has taxed his strength.

Justice Gordon has served the District and the United States for nearly a half century.

Army Taking Steps to Avert Camp Epidemics

Cleavand, Oct. 11 (AP) —Two prominent military medical officers today outlined steps against outbursts of epidemic diseases in the coming draft army.

Every effort is being made to avert such epidemics of colds, influenza, meningitis, measles, mumps and other contagious diseases, Col. Leon A. Fox of the army medical corps and Commander J. C. Adams of the Navy medical corps told the association of military surgeons, and indications are that the efforts will be successful.

Overcrowding of men being drawn into the Army and Navy is one of the most serious problems, Colonel Fox and Commander Adams declared. This permits contagious disease germs to spread like wildfire.

Dies Agents Seize N. Y. Firm's Files In Nazi Hunt

Copyright by New York Times

The files of "certain companies in New York" have been seized under Congressional subpena and turned over to the State Department for its action, it was announced by the office of the Dies Committee here today. The names of the firms were not given, but it was said that their records were investigated as part of the committee's probe of Nazi activities in the country.

Their reference to the State Department would indicate that possible action against these companies, or individuals connected with them, for failure to register as agents of a foreign government might be envisaged, or that action might be taken against diplomatic or consular representatives who might be involved in the seized correspondence.

Representative Voorhis, of California, a member of the committee, said yesterday that he will proceed to Los Angeles next week to take secret testimony in regard to alleged "Fifth Column" activities on the West Coast relating to industrial production for the national defense.

James D. Marshall was appointed assistant managing director to succeed Foreman.

A new law is needed to correct the situation which requires persons to buy back stolen goods from pawnbrokers or secondhand dealers, Vernon E. West, acting corporation counsel, said yesterday.

West said he will suggest that Commissioners instruct the police property clerk hereafter to advise victims of thieves that they may elect to go to court to regain their property if they do not choose to pay the dealers' price.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran has asked the Commissioners to take steps to stop the present practice of selling back stolen goods to their owners at the price paid by the dealers to the thieves.

Canterbury Blasted Hard, Nazis Report

Cathedral Town Takes Day's Worst Aerial Pounding

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Oct. 11.—The German air force in strong squadrons dealt out hard punishment today in a wide foray over southeast England, DNB, the official news agency, reported tonight.

Canterbury (where, the British said, windows of the historic cathedral were smashed), took the worst drubbing, according to the agency's accounts.

Returning pilots reported their bombs hit "objectives" and lifted great columns of smoke above the town.

Rail Facilities Bombed

A factory in another southeast town was declared demolished, and bomb hits on rail facilities along the coast were reported so effective that traffic will be impossible for a long time.

The raiders had to fight a series of dog fights, and shot down 13 defense planes, it was said, losing but one of their own. A patrol boat was bombed off Ramsgate, the account stated.

During the afternoon, authorized sources here said, several units of German bombers raided London, "continuing planned destruction." They were declared to have carried out their assignments unhindered by British antiaircraft guns.

Victoria Station Hit

D. N. B., elaborating on the official report of last night's raids, said that London's sprawling Victoria Station, in the West End, was hit hard and that numerous fires were started by bombs in midcity. Half a million pounds of bombs were dropped on London alone last night, Nazis said.

Spokesmen insisted that widespread British raids over Germany and German-occupied countries last night had caused no important damage and none at all to military objectives. However, they listed a score of persons killed in western Germany and 18 in Amsterdam and said that there was "devastation" over a residential area half a mile in radius at Hamburg and that another section of the city was left "a shambles of ashes."

British raids in half a dozen western German cities were acknowledged, with nonmilitary objects such as houses and hospitals declared hit.

Cherbourg Bombarded

Tonight authorized sources announced that British light naval forces had bombarded Cherbourg on the night of October 10-11, adding: "As accurate night shooting without searchlights is impossible, British shells hit only a few houses in Cherbourg."

Earlier, this had been characterized here as only an attempted attack by one British cruiser.

The German coastal artillery, these sources said, fired a few shots in the direction of the British ships, whose position was revealed by their muzzle blasts. Then, it was added, the Britishers withdrew.

The informants asserted that a few hours later Nazi reconnaissance planes discovered a heavy British cruiser 20 miles northwest of Cherbourg; that German long-range coastal guns opened fire and that the cruiser turned about without firing a shot.

Army Exhibits Guns and Lights At Film Opening

The Army put on a display in front of the Earle Theater last night when War Department officials attended the premiere of the technicolor short, "Service With the Colors." The 260th Coast Artillery Band played in front of the theater.

On display were two searchlights, a 37-millimeter machine gun, on 81-millimeter infantry mortar, a .30-caliber machine gun, two portable radio sets, a telegraph set and other equipment from the Arlington Cantonment where the Twelfth Infantry is stationed.

A trailer recruiting station stood at the theater door.

Among those attending the premiere were Robert P. Patterson, Assistant Secretary of War; Maj. Gen. E. S. Adams, Col. H. H. Pfeil, Col. H. N. Gilbert, Lieut. Col. J. E. Dahlquist, Lieut. Col. Talley D. Joiner, Lieut. Col. W. H. Maris, Lieut. Col. F. A. Allen and Gen. J. R. Lindsay (retired).

Gen. J. N. Greely To Command D. C. Brigade

Succeeds Gen. Devers As Head of Fort Myer, Arlington Units

The Army yesterday assigned Brig. Gen. John N. Greely to succeed Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers as commander of the Washington Provisional Brigade, embracing the units at Fort Myer and Arlington Cantonment, Va.

GEN. GREELY

Gen. Greely, son of the late Maj. Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, Arctic explorer and a native of the District, recently returned from Spain, where he was military attache for more than a year. Gen. Devers on Thursday was ordered to command the new Ninth Division.

At the same time the War Department announced the transfer of seven other officers, part of the reorganization now underway. During the day President Roosevelt also nominated Capts. Henry Williams and Robert Theobald for posts of rear admirals in the Navy.

Three ranking naval air officers also were reassigned. Rear Admiral Arthur L. Bristol, jr., commander of carrier division 1, was transferred to command the patrol wings of the fleet with additional duty as commander of scouting force aircraft. Rear Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, commander of patrol wing 2, was named to succeed Admiral Bristol, and Capt. Frederick N. L. Bellinger, now commander of the naval air station at Norfolk, to take Admiral Fitch's post.

Williams, a native of Hagerstown, Md., holds a high post in the Bureau of Ships here. Capt. Theobald commands Destroyer Flotilla No. 1.

Gen. Greely, 55, is a graduate of Yale. He entered the Army in 1908 and served with the Seventh Field Artillery and later with the staff of the First Division in France during the World War. He received the Distinguished Service Medal for his war service.

Harding from Hawaii to the Ninth Division at Fort Bragg, N. C.; send Brig. Gen. James P. Marley from the War Department to the Eighth Division, Fort Jackson, S. C.; assign Brig. Gen. Terry de la M. Allen to command the Third Cavalry Brigade, Fort Riley, Kans., from Fort Bliss, and relieve Maj. Gen. Frederick H. Smith from command of the Coast Artillery School, Fort Monroe, Va., in order to become a coastal frontier defense commander.

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Twenty students at Union Theological Seminary announced today that they would refuse to register for selective service and, instead, submit a 1,400-word statement giving their reasons.

Even Science Needs Religion As a Guide, Says Compton

Physicist Holds World Must Learn How To Use Its Gains Well by Elevating Ideals Through Leadership of Church

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

Odd, isn't it, for a cool, calculating scientist, a physicist who works with such impersonal things as atoms and X-rays, to concern himself with religion and the improvement of man's humanity to man?

Dr. Arthur H. Compton doesn't think so.

"In science there is strength," he said yesterday, "but we must look to religion and religious leaders if that strength is to be applied in the best way. The more we learn through science, the greater becomes the need to elevate our ideals."

Nobel Prize winner and professor of physics at the University of Chicago, Dr. Compton addressed the Washington Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews at the Cosmos Club last night. He is national Protestant cochairman of the organization.

"In these times, when we are being threatened by anti-American forces, national unity is of paramount importance," he declared. "The conference of Christians and Jews is working toward this unity, which cannot be achieved as long as there is discord over religious problems."

Asked to comment in an interview earlier in the day on the statement recently ascribed to Dr. Albert Einstein that he does not believe in a personal God, Dr. Compton said:

"Probably none of us has the same definition of 'personal God.' If my beliefs were compared with Dr. Einstein's, I have an idea they would be quite the same."

Science is both innocent and guilty of the wave of death and destruction in Europe and China today, according to Dr. Compton. Innocent because the knowledge which begot the war machines resulted only from the eternal quest of truth, and guilty because the things which applied science has produced have made life more complex, paving the way to war.

The question, frequently raised, as to whether science hasn't gone too far is a reasonable one, the physicist asserted, yet there can be only one answer: Truth will not be downed, knowledge cannot be prevented from emerging, hence science has no choice but to go forward.

Contrary to what some believe, scientists are not frigid, aloof creatures interested solely in their immediate job. For the most part, said Dr. Compton, they are humanitarians and idealists. They are after truth and facts, but they hope those truths and facts will benefit mankind.

"I have no trouble at all getting a man to work in my laboratory on something which will do good, but it's the hardest thing finding someone to accept an assignment aimed at developing something that maims or destroys," he said.

Episcopalians Ignore Japan's Blow at Church

Funds Appropriated For Missions Despite Fear of Ouster

By Leo Branham
Associated Press Staff Writer

Kansas City, Oct. 11.—The Protestant Episcopal Church moved today to continue its missionary work in Japan despite threatened curtailment under a Japanese government decree.

A proposed triennial budget of $7,300,000 submitted to the church's convention includes an annual appropriation of $226,000 for Japanese missions.

Described as the "normal" yearly allotment, the figure was put forth in the face of a Tokyo decree effective October 17 placing all American church-sponsored schools and hospitals under rigid Japanese jurisdiction. The edict provides such institutions must have staffs composed only of natives and that foreign money may not be accepted.

The church now maintains St. Paul's University in Tokyo, two large hospitals and 40 schools throughout Japan. Their staffs include a large number of native priests and workers.

Some delegates said the three Episcopalian bishops in Japan probably would be forced to resign. Others fear the entire foreign staff of 60 persons might be ordered to leave.

Lewis B. Franklin, of New York, layman treasurer of the church's national council, said that if the American missionaries were ousted the $226,000 still would be needed to pay their traveling expenses and salaries until new appointments could be made.

Formal action on the budget will be taken later.

Today's scheduled resumption of discussion on proposed liberalization of the church marriage and divorce canon was postponed.

"Ultimate union" of the Episcopal and Presbyterian Churches was seen tonight by Dr. William Lindsay Young, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., who urged that the two groups "begin to work together at certain tasks."

In a speech at an informal session, Dr. Young, who also is president of Park College, Parkville, Md., suggested that as "an example" Presbyterian churches direct their students to Episcopal schools in areas where there were no Presbyterian schools, and vice versa. He also proposed interchange of faculty members and representatives on the boards of trustees.

"There are serious obstacles to be overcome," he said, but "if we can bear our burdens together and enter into each other's joys we will soon have that esprit de corps which is basic to ultimate union.

"My earnest prayer tonight is that I may live to stand before you some time and address, not your church, not my church, but our church."

Lutherans Continue Drive For Unity

Debate on Doctrine Concerning Bible Postpones Merger

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 11.—Debate over wording of a statement relative to the doctrine of "God's Word the Bible" postponed action today toward establishment of the cooperative federation of the United Lutheran Church of America and the American Lutheran Church, representing together approximately 2,000,000 members of the Lutheran faith.

The debate will be resumed tomorrow.

Delegates to the U. L. C. A. convention here were concerned chiefly over the meaning of the word "errorless."

The statement is one of three moot points which must be approved by the Lutherans here and the American Lutheran Church in Detroit before unity can be established. The other points deal with exchange of pulpit courtesies with clergymen of other communions and memberships in social organizations apart from the church.

Dr. H. H. Bagger, of Pittsburgh, secretary of the U. L. C. A. commission which helped to draw up the statements, urged its adoption by the convention. Dr. H. Grady Davis, of the Chicago Lutheran Seminary, opposed adoption, declaring "errorless" to be a misleading and confusing word.

The statement in which the word appears declares the Bible to be "the Word of God," consisting of a number of separate books, written at various times, on various occasions, whose authors are "living, thinking personalities, each endowed by the Creator with an individuality of his own . . ."

Nevertheless, the statement added, "by a unique operation of the Holy Spirit, by which He supplied to the holy writers content and fitting word, the separate books of the Bible are related to one another, and taken together, constitute a complete, errorless unbreakable whole of which Christ is the center . . ."

46,443 Needed To Reach D. C. Roll Call Goal

Daily Enrollment Of 6,635 Necessary In Next 7 Days

With only seven working days of the Red Cross Roll Call remaining, 46,443 memberships are still needed to reach the goal of 130,000. By yesterday, 83,557 enrollments had been reported by Roll Call workers, leaving an average of 6,635 daily members still to be returned.

Edgar Morris, general chairman, declared that the success of the Roll Call will be in sight if 100,000 memberships are received by Monday. This would leave 30,000 enrollments to be obtained in the last five days of the membership campaign, he said.

Memberships reported by general business units yesterday passed the 10,000 mark, but fell 325 behind the total for the same date of the 1939 drive. Government units maintained their better than average pace, returning 5,303 memberships yesterday.

The support of the Roll Call by the American Federation of Labor was voiced yesterday by William Green, president. Meeting with Morris, Green issued the following statement:

"The American Federation of Labor and all of its affiliated members responded promptly and generously to the call of the Red Cross for funds for the relief of victims of the war raging in Europe. Our of the value of such an agency as response showed our appreciation the Red Cross, impartially devoted to its mission of mercy to the needy.

"The 1940 annual Red Cross roll call takes place at a time when misery prevails throughout the world and when millions of refugees are seeking havens in all neutral countries. Our continued support is needed, and I hope one and all may respond."

Yesterday afternoon, the junior division of Gunston Hall School staged a Red Cross pageant to stimulate interest in the Roll Call.

Financial firms reporting 100 per cent enrollment of their employes yesterday were the Northern Liberty Building Association, A. N. Miller, real estate, and E. Quincy Smith Co., real estate.

U. S. Wholesalers Called to Discuss Part in Defense

Calling a conference of wholesale distributors in Washington on November 12, Harriet Elliott, member of the National Defense Commission, said yesterday that "we are seeking their counsel and their active cooperation in avoiding unwarranted price increases in consumer goods."

Miss Elliott said that since a similar conference with retailers six weeks ago there had been many requests from the wholesale trades for such a meeting.

A conference would discuss the relation of national defense and the wholesale distribution of consumer goods, Miss Elliott added.

She said that more than 150 dealers representing about 75 wholesale trade groups were expected to participate.

Luise Rainer's Father Lands, Reports Hitler's Grip Unshaken

Germans Have Faith in Fuehrer Because He Has Kept His Promises To Them, Actress' Parent Asserts

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 11.—Tears of joy rolled down the cheeks of Luise Rainer today as she embraced her 65-year-old father on his arrival from Europe, where he recently was freed from a Prague prison camp.

Heinrich Rainer, who once conducted a thriving export-import business in Hamburg and Brussels, appeared equally joyous at seeing his daughter and wife, who were waiting at the pier when the American liner Excambion arrived from Lisbon.

He dismissed any possibility of an internal uprising in Germany with the declaration that Hitler was almost like a god to his people.

"The German people like Hitler," he said, "because he has kept his promises to them. That is why they believe in him."

The liner brought 198 passengers, 1,030 bags of mail which had been censored at Bermuda, and $1,750,000 in gold.

Clayton E. Whipple, 37, a native of Perry, N. Y., who had been directing rural education for the Near East Foundation at Sofia, Bulgaria, told of tenseness in the Balkans.

"The Communists," he said, "have direct orders to work against the Germans in the Balkans and the Near East. The Balkan countries are still looking toward America for help."

An acute food situation in Spain was described by Prince Rene de Bourbon, who arrived with his three children. After serving three months with the Finnish artillery, he said, he fled to Paris and thence to Lisbon. He drove 600 miles through Spain without being able to buy a single piece of bread, he said. He told of seeing numerous uniformed German soldiers in unoccupied France, particularly in Cannes, Nice and Perpignan.

Nazis Allow French Commercial Shipping

Berlin, Oct. 11 (AP).—Germany will permit France to continue her commercial shipping freely, authorized sources said today, on one condition: That the French sink their vessels in the event of British attack.

They said the French may send their vessels along the coast and to all French colonies, but under no circumstances could they permit them to fall into British hands.

Wars Blamed On Neglect of 'Inner World'

Dr. Hart, Sociologist, Says Sensory Things Are Over-Emphasized

One of the chief reasons why "nations have been blundering into war and so many people are depressed" is because "we have applied ourselves to the sensory world and neglected the enner world," Dr. Hornall Hart, professor of sociology at Duke University, told an audience at the Department of Agriculture auditorium yesterday.

Declaring that "the normal form of life is joy," Dr. Hart cited surveys concluding that one-fourth of the people in America are living in unhappiness, and one-seventh of the population occasionally struggles against the impulse to commit suicide.

Linking the imagination to the "inner world," Dr. Hart said that "every product of human aspiration has been created first in the imagination. It had first to be thought out before it became an actuality."

This country's preoccupation with the "sensory world" is evidenced by the fact that most young men and young women are entering the fields of engineering, science and business instead of "fields of the creative imagination," he said, adding, "The clear characteristic of the age is preoccupation with the things you can see and touch, with physical instruments."

He warned that "the will to destroy is increasingly shattering the foundations of life." In later lectures of the series he said he proposes to answer the questions "How can we get back to normal life?" "How can we make a contribution to the world?" and "How can we make the best of what life hands out?"

Five more lectures in the series will be held at 5 p. m. each Monday in the Department of Agriculture auditorium through November 15.

Big Business of Gambling Explained to Chicago Jury

Johnson, No-Limit Crap Shooter, Called Overlord of Betting Trust; U. S. Case Now in Deliberation

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 11.—The big business side of Chicago's gambling industry and what keeps its roulette wheels turning were pictured in detail in the Federal income tax prosecution of William R. Johnson, the no-limit craps shooter, which went to the jury today.

Prosecutors declared that Johnson was the "overlord" or the "czar" of Chicago gambling. They said he had an organization, a syndicate, of at least 23 joints that operated with a chain store efficiency "rivaling the Federal Reserve Bank."

He had, they said, a clearing house, a private telephone system—joint to joint—and a central supply depot furnishing gambling paraphernalia.

The gamblers, it was charged, also had a currency exchange serving as their bank, a repair and maintenance crew, free interjoint bus service for the customers and even a school for dealers and shills—who play with house money to stimulate the games.

A map of Chicago and suburgs put in evidence was studded with pins marking the gambling house locations—including the Horseshoe, the D. & D. Club, the Villa Moderne and Bon Air Country Club.

The Government alleged that Johnson received a tremendous income from all these spots—$3,377,615 from 1936 through 1939—but that he reported only $764,215. He and eight codefendants were charged with conspiring to evade $1,887,864 in taxes on his income for those years.

An invocation and benediction will be delivered by the Rev. Denis Mooney. Music will be supplied by the Government Printing Office Orchestra.

A Dormant Issue

Foremost among the forgotten issues of the 1940 campaigns are the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements. Senator McNary has made some uncomplimentary remarks about the trade agreements on several occasions. For the most part, however, the political differences between the Democrats and Republicans over tariff policies have remained submerged beneath more immediate issues.

When the President's power to continue negotiating reciprocal trade agreements was renewed last spring, there were indications that the act would be one of the chief bones of contention in the 1940 campaigns. But that was before all continental Europe had fallen under the sway of the dictatorial powers. Reciprocal trade agreements have since become a dead issue because there is now no prospect of negotiating such pacts, except possibly with countries of the Western Hemisphere. And no one can foresee at present what mechanism will be needed for the conduct of foreign trade when the war is over.

One aspect of the trade problem arising from the growth of totalitarianism was touched upon by Wendell Willkie in his address at Providence. "I look forward constantly," he said, "to the day when international tariff barriers will be reduced. I hope that in the years to come we can see the flow of international trade increased. But it is absurd and contradictory that we in America, who believe in decent standards of living and who support proper wage-and-hour standards, should permit the entry into this country of goods manufactured by the oppressed workers of the dictatorships."

The importation of goods produced by very cheap labor in Japan has long been a difficult problem for some American industries. Impoverishment resulting from the war is likely to intensify that sort of competition. It may be necessary to confine liberal trade policies to those parts of the world where they can be operated without putting our economic system at a disadvantage.

For that matter, the wide variation between labor standards here and in some of the totalitarian countries is only one of many trade problems that will have to be faced when the war is over. The type of trading mechanism we shall then need will depend entirely upon the type of world in which we shall then be living. It is a mark of good judgment on Mr. Willkie's part that he has not attempted to outline in detail ways and means of dealing with a situation that cannot possibly be foreseen.

In Mare Nostrum

To Fascist Italy the Mediterranean is Mare Nostrum, "our sea," but at present that is metaphor rather than actuality. The effective control of that great body of water, along whose shores European civilization was cradled, remains in the hands of the British.

Britain's Mediterranean position is far from being wholly satisfactory. The defection of France left Great Britain to prosecute the war on the Axis powers alone. It deprived the British of considerable naval and military power in North Africa and the Near East. And it enabled Italy to launch her attack on Egypt without having to worry about Libya's western border.

Yet Great Britain has managed to maintain her Mediterranean communications almost unimpaired. The other day, for instance, British destroyers, convoyed by larger naval vessels, traveled 1,000 miles to carry reinforcements to Malta, which has been bombed almost daily by Italian planes since Italy entered the war on June 10. Malta still stands, another symbol of Britain's resistance.

So does Gibraltar. That great fortified rock which lies athwart the western end of the Mediterranean has only occasionally been under aerial attack. But a full dress assault may not be far off, despite Spain's obvious reluctance to enter the fray. That is why part of Winston Churchill's speech of last Tuesday was a plea to Spain to stay out of the war.

No one knows better than Britain's doughty premier of the difficulties and dangers that await Great Britain not only at home but in the Mediterranean as well. For that reason he refuses to take the comfort open to him in the strength which the British fleet has displayed and continues to display in the middle sea. While pointing out the satisfactory aspects of the general situation, he has again warned his people that "long, dark months of trial and tribulation lie before us."

The 1940 Session

Barring unforeseen developments, the legislative work of the present Congress has virtually come to an end. Some important issues are still pending, but Congress is not disposed to transact further business in advance of the election.

Since late spring, public attention has been concentrated almost exclusively upon the defense program. Yet the legislation enacted has not been entirely confined to that field. Two major regulatory laws were passed, one providing for investment-trust regulation and the other extensively modifying the Interstate Commerce Act. By the latter Act, Congress placed water carriers under the same type of regulation applicable to railroads, thus meeting a long-felt need for a unified transportation policy.

Enactment of Senator Hatch's second "clean-politics" bill, banning political activity on the part of State and municipal employes paid wholly or in part from Federal funds, was a notable achievement. The spoilsmen in the Senate did their best to emasculate the bill and the Judiciary Committee of the House tried to kill it. A storm of indignation within and without Congress forced reconsideration of that committee's tabling resolution and the measure was finally approved.

A number of important legislative proposals not directly connected with the defense program failed to pass, including the Ramspeck civil-service bill. The struggle over proposed amendments to the Wage-Hour Law, and the National Labor Relations Act was especially bitter. Revision of these measures remains a pressing item of legislative business to which an incoming Congress will have to give attention. Fortunately a great deal of hard committee work has been done and prolonged hearings held in preparation for changes.

The Walter-Logan bill, providing for uniformity of procedure by Federal administrative agencies, is another controversial as well as complicated measure awaiting Senate action. In this instance a vote seems to be assured after the pre-election recesses, when the report of the Attorney General's special committee will be available.

Congress voted huge sums for agricultural relief this year, including parity payments to farmers, along with loans and benefits, bringing agricultural appropriations close to the record level of the past fiscal year. It also empowered the President to spend the funds appropriated for work relief during the first eight months of the fiscal year, if necessary. Thus, plans for budgetary economy would have gone awry even if emergency defense spending had not upset all calculations.

The defense program will, of course, be regarded as the major legislative achievement of the 1940 session just drawing to a close. Congress has authorized outlays for defense purposes totaling almost $13,000,000,000. It has approved peacetime conscription, adopted measures for control of aliens, and voted to impose taxes on excess profits to finance part of the cost of preparedness. In addition, it approved permanent broadening of the income-tax base and lowered exemptions.

Congress undoubtedly labored hard before as well as after the defense issue became paramount. It was vigorous in debate, but it showed a dismaying indifference to the need for reducing expenditures even before the defense program made extraordinary outlays imperative.

Print A Month

Local artists in the United States have received fresh encouragement in recent years, especially from the Government. The wider distribution of their work has been of benefit to people all over the country as well as to the artists themselves.

In Cleveland a privately sponsored plan, originated three years ago, has proved successful and beneficial to both artists and the public. Using the Book of the Month Club as a pattern, the new organization calls itself the Print a Month Club. As the name implies, the club distributed twelve prints a year to its subscribers at a price far below that for which comparable prints could be purchased singly in the market.

Now the print-makers of Washington propose to start a similar club here, distributing to its subscribers the works of artists resident in the District, Maryland and Virginia. A distinguished jury has already been chosen to meet several times a year and select prints for circulation each month. Members will thus have assurance of interesting and varied selections for their homes. The founders hope the organization will get under way this month.

If the plan is as successful here as it is reported to have been in Cleveland, the club should prove a valuable stimulus to artistic endeavor in Washington. At any rate, it is an experiment that will be watched with interest.

On Exporting Airplanes

The recent prohibitions raised against the shipment of American-made airplanes to Siam and Sweden scarcely need explanation. Obviously it was feared that these planes might fall into hands unfriendly to the United States or might be employed for purposes inimical to our security. The reported employment of American-made planes in the recent bombardment of Gibraltar by the French North African pilots is proof enough that such fears are not unreasonable.

The situation is complicated, so far as Sweden is concerned, by the fact that the Swedish government had already paid for the planes it had ordered from the Republic Aircraft Corporation. Agents of the British were reported to have offered to repurchase these planes from Sweden. But the Swedish government is said to have declined the offer on the quite reasonable ground that this might incur the severe displeasure of the Axis powers.

However, a bill now before the President for signature authorizes the purchase by the United States of any war materials deemed to be unexportable. Thus the Government is in a position to take over these planes and resell them to Britain or Canada, and there is little doubt that this will be done.

A still more convincing reason for clamping down on the shipment of American-made airplanes to neutral or quasi-neutral countries is the fact that the entire productive capacity of the industry is needed to satisfy our own defense requirements and continue shipments to Great Britain. The request by the War Department that wherever possible airplane factories adopt a 24-hour day indicates something of the strain to which this industry already has been put. Plane production is nevertheless lagging behind the pace which the National Defense Commission hoped to attain.

The fundamental difficulty, of course, is the impossibility of transforming a handicraft industry overnight into a mass-production industry. It will, indeed, be something of an industrial miracle if the process of "rationalization," which the automobile producers accomplished only after many years, can be achieved by our aircraft producers in a few months.

The Scow Scandal

For some years now Messrs. Robert M. Hutchins and Mortimer Adler have been warning us about how Western civilization in general and the American way of life in particular are being undermined by various heresies and fallacies nourished in our institutions of higher learning. We confess that heretofore we took these strictures with a grain of salt. But now the indictment seems to be fully sustained.

The reason for this profound volte-face on our part is the shocking expose of conditions in New York City's Sanitation Department. It is not difficult to trace the primary responsibility for this scandal to the influence of some of our great colleges and universities.

It had been commonly supposed that work on a New York garbage scow was conducive to the contemplative cast of mind. The fact is, however, that many of these scowmen, especially the younger ones, are hearty extraverted fellows, reasonably fond of manly sports. Thus there was mild surprise, but no suspicion, when in 1939 the Sanitation Department's baseball team defeated the crack Police Department outfit by a score of 5 to 2. But this year when the scowmen played rings around the poor cops, making them seem rather worse than the Jimsonweed Juniors on an off day, why the thing just didn't make any sense. Somebody decided to investigate.

Imagine the consternation of this investigator when he discovered that the first-string pitcher for the Sanitation Team is no other than Mr. Bots Nekola, late of the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers. The second baseman is Mr. Al Cuccinello, whilom New York Giant. And most of the other points on the infield and outfield are guarded by alumni of the International and other Class AA leagues. These virtuosi, it seems, have been solemnly enrolled on the employment records of the Sanitation Department as "scowmen."

Mr. Emil K. Ellis, counsel for the Municipal Service Commission, put it very mildly indeed when he described this disgraceful business as "a very serious challenge to the merit system in civil service." This is what comes of winking a tolerant eye at third basemen who wouldn't know a gerund from a gerundive and pitchers who couldn't tell a hypotenuse from a hippogriff.

When officials of a great municipality, corrupted perhaps by the example of some of our college presidents, deliberately adopt the pretense that mere experience in big-league baseball sufficiently qualifies a man for tossing wornout oranges, defunct cantaloupes and ancient tomatoes into the Atlantic Ocean, it is time to take radical action.

An historian says he is worrying about what may happen to this world in the next 1,000 years. He's lucky. We're worrying about what may happen to it in the next 24 hours.

Gallup Poll Vs. Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Gallup Poll was right in 1936. It smells to high heaven in 1940. Can this poll be anything but a racket designed to create a psychological effect unfavorable to Willkie? Wherever you go Willkie is the man of the hour. Yet Gallup shows Roosevelt in the lead. Obviously the poll is cockeyed.

It would be an amazing commentary on the intelligence of the American electorate if the "indispensable man" could make such a hopeless mess of things for over seven years and still be in favor. Is Gallup honestly in error, or is he deliberately trying to start a stampede for Roosevelt by swaying the undecided voters who like to be with the winner?

But let the third-termites do what they will. The Gallup Poll will never be heard of again after this election. The Nation is for Willkie. GEORGE A. LAWSON.

Disagrees With Miss Thompson

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is only one encouraging and factual quality contained in Miss Dorothy Thompson's avowal through her column that "I shall support the President because I think he has assets which no one can match." This quality is her reliance on the fair play and freedom of the American press, most of which disagrees with her conclusion.

The strongest arguments she can muster are based on events in, and opinion of, foreign countries. She says, for instance, that the Democratic candidate for a third term as President of the United States is highly thought of in Europe, South America, and, we hope, in Asia; that he "knows the world . . . better than any other living democratic head of a state."

One naturally would like to ask Miss Thompson if she thinks this explains Mr. Roosevelt's lag in national defense? How does she explain his allowing the Congressional appropriation for defense to drop to 494 millions after he first took office (which was 173 millions under the last Hoover appropriation), in the meantime pouring out workbillions for the unemployed to build windbreaks, put up unneeded schoolhouses and resurrect graveyards?

How does Miss Thompson uphold her argument when she remembers that it was not until the world actually burst into the flames of 1939 that our defense appropriations crossed the billion dollar line?

What, however, concerns us as a voting people at this moment, and what should concern Miss Thompson, is which Presidential candidate can now build quickest our necessary safeguards. For, presumably, even if Mr. Roosevelt is defeated the American diplomatic agents stationed in foreign countries will continue to inform the President of the United States as to what is happening abroad, and therefore whoever holds that office will be knowing. Some of us on pretty good evidence of past performance believe that a great organizer such as Mr. Willkie answers this concern.

For Miss Thompson in her absorption with foreign opinion neglects to analyze Mr. Roosevelt's domestic record.

It is not one that inspires confidence for the future. It is not the record of a good organizer, or a man who by conciliation and by realizing the rights of every citizen, rich or poor, has united his country against the internal dangers of financial depression or the menace of foreign enmity. On the other hand it is a record of disorganizing class partisanship.

Miss Thompson states that Mr. Roosevelt can be a very great man in time of emergency. No one who thinks of his country above party can wish to underrate the President of the Nation. There indeed was not an unbiased person who in 1932 did not look to Mr. Roosevelt with hope, with faith that in the emergency measures he inaugurated to stop the depression he was acting with necessary speed and vision. There is today no deeply rooted American who does not want to see men given the opportunity of self-respecting employment, no one who does not believe in social benefits, no one who does not see that reform is necessary to the growth of a free country.

But the pity and tragedy since 1932 have been not reform, but license. We have seen the President surrounded by advisers who have undermined the rights afforded us by our hard-won Constitution under the name of reform.

The example of the Supreme Court is the best known, an attempt to enlarge it so that the votes of those judges who disagreed with the President might be outnumbered by those of new judges in agreement with his political philosophy. But there are many instances known chiefly to lawyers, students and the victims—these are acts of Government bureaus recently set up and given court powers, entirely illegally. These bureaus have seemed to be possessed with a spirit of class differentiation. Surely Miss Thompson thinks that if the average citizen, either individually or banded with his fellows into a business corporation, cannot be sure of justice administered by legal courts our Nation is in an unhealthy state?

We who live here in Washington have seen a vast expansion of the Government. Physically it has engulfed the city, spiritually it has intimidated the entire country. We have today 100 thousand more population of officials and their families since Mr. Roosevelt took office. The taxes of all of us go to pay their salaries while they make autocratic rules governing the lives of each of us, and array class against class in the America which formerly prided itself on being class free.

Undoubtedly there is such a thing as orderly reform, undoubtedly there were abuses in our business world which no one knows more intimately or will eradicate more intelligently than a man of large and honest business experience such as Mr. Willkie. Even Miss Thompson, we notice, cannot forbear giving Wendell Willkie a passing pat on the shoulder. But the most optimistic person cannot say today that America is not at sixes and sevens or that a country which has to go to war to put men back to work has been "saved" from a depression.

We cannot but feel that if after eight years a President has not been able to rehabilitate a great rich country such as ours we need a change in leadership. This is the vital reason why many of us who have never been anything but Democrats are working to elect Mr. Willkie—this, and the entire faith we have in Mr. Willkie's ability, his patriotism and his knowledge of the world.

As much as we admire Miss Thompson's ability to manipulate words, her opinions are worth just what any individual's are, and her reasoning seems to us to be faulty.

Disappointed

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It was with amazement and disappointment that I read that Dorothy Thompson is to support Roosevelt. After all the criticism she has hurled at this Administration, such a right-about-face is almost unbelievable.

I am also amazed that any American citizen can favor a third term. I believe they do not think very deeply on the import of that move, and would recommend that they read an article in the October Reader's Digest called "The Dead Hand of Bureaucracy."

Roosevelt has already built a top-heavy bureaucracy, which means that everyone in that structure will naturally vote for him. Give him another four years and both bureaus and voters will be increased, by which time there will be so many voters employed by Roosevelt, that another four years will be assured. When he gets control of everybody, then our democracy will be at an end.

I believe that any new President would surely have access to all important documents and papers that are necessary, and any intelligent man who might be elected, with the advice of his Cabinet, ought to be able to go right on where the last Executive left off. England "changed horses in midstream" to her advantage, and anyway, we are not yet in midstream. C. I. B.

World Series

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The victory of the Cincinnati Reds over the Detroit Tigers in a seven-game uphill contest recalls the Washington-Giant contest of 1924. In that World Series the New York Giants won the first, third and fifth games, while Washington won the second, fourth, sixth and seventh. Having evened the series three times, they finally forged ahead to victory on the seventh and final game, which was the only odd-numbered game that they won.

Bill McKechnie, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, must have plucked a leaf from Bucky Harris, for the Reds won the recent series in exactly the same order. While there have been a number of seven-game World Series, the series this year and the one in 1924 appear to be the only two in which the opposing teams alternated victories during the first six games, only to have the winner of the even-numbered games win the final odd game and take the series.

So history repeats itself even in baseball. JOHN A. DILLS,

Reproves Mr. Willkie

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I cannot refrain from making a remark with reference to Willkie's speech in New York City yesterday.

I could take issue with him on various statements he made, and continues to make without any proof as to their genuineness, but there is just one thing I wish to say, and that is, that any one who calls our President a liar, for that's what his statement amounted to, is unfit to be running for this high office, and would debase it if elected. I would say the same if Mr. Roosevelt were a Republican instead of a Democrat. C. A. P.

A Different Horse

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is my conviction that Mr. Hitler is neither so honest or so stupid as to infer that he hopes the third-term candidate will win November 5. Mr. Hitler is possibly one of those people who think it is unwise to change horses in the middle of the stream. This stream has been flowing so smoothly for him for seven years and the horse has not yet interfered with his plans. Then, too, Mr. Willkie might prove to be a quite different kind of horse.

Guano

On the bare and scattered islands off the Peruvian coast the Independent Birds of the World have their convention headquarters. They have been holding annual conventions there since long before stout-hearted Pizarro came sailing by to startle them into myriad flight.

Hence, guano!

About 120 miles south of Paita, the first port generally touched by steamers southward bound on the Peruvian coast, you pass the first of these rich convention islands, Lobos de Afuera and Lobos de Tierra (literally, from the Spanish, "Outside" and "Inside Seal"), and thence all the sea way down to Callao for most of two days, and clearly visible from the ship's deck, the Macabi Islands, the Huanapes off Salaverry, where steamers make cargo stops, Majorca in the Huara group and, only 20 miles out of Callao, the Pescadores.

Every one of these rocky islands, peaks of submerged volcanic mountains, is literally covered with the I. B. W. sitting in almost continuous convention for six months out of every year, and every one of them has a geology of stratified guano at varying depths of from 6 to 20 feet.

After leaving Callao bound south the steamer, arriving at and departing from the small port of Pisco, skirts the especially bird-populous Chincha Islands, which form the southernmost of the commercially profitable guano archipelago, almost as profitable in modern times to Peruvian export trade as the gold of Peru was to the Spanish conquistadores 400 years ago. At Arica, however, still farther south on the Chilean coast, when the wind is from the southwest, the aroma of the uncommercially profitable but very sincere guano, wafted from the chalky islets that form the harbor's natural breakwater, drives delicate passengers ashore from ships at anchor in the roadstead and tends to spoil one's appetite for luncheon at the Cafe Bella Vista.

Before natural nitrate achieved international appreciation a half century ago, guano was the most valuable commercial fertilizer known to the world. In fact, out of guano emerged the independence of modern Peru and from its fertilization grew the great shipping firm of W. R. Grace & Co., popularly known as "La Casa de Grace" from one end of the long west coast to the other, from Balboa to the Straits of Magellan. It was in 1850 that W. R. Grace sailed from Ireland with his father for Peru, where they began supplying ship's stores to the largest fleet of sailing vessels then assembled anywhere in the world which came annually to the Chincha Islands for Peruvian guano.

The I. B. W. does not include all the birds in the Pacific world, but it does include the amalgamated lodges of cormorants, albatross, petrels, pelicans, ducks, geese and gulls—all the web-footed, fish-eating, feathered brotherhoods. And their conventions would make the Ku Klux or the Elks or the Shriners, or any other convening bipeds, look mighty sick and insignificant.

If chambers of commerce in North American cities, who spend each year huge sums of money prying human conventions loose from one another, would send a delegation down here to confer with the I. B. W. they might learn something. These birds convene annually by the tens and hundreds of millions! The thing is unbelievable!

What seems at first, from the ship's deck, to be distant clouds veiling the entire western horizon, resolve themselves into innumerable flying delegations coming in to convention headquarters; enormous patches of shadow over the blue ocean become nations of birds that, on the ship's approach, roughen the whole face of the sea like a sudden squall as they rise into flight.

The great masses are too vast for study in motive, but in some of the ports in this sector of the voyage to "Valpa" (Valparaiso, corresponding to north coast "Frisco"), you will encounter small committee meetings and bird conferences being held on anchored lighters or on the big mooring buoys to which ships tie up astern after they swing to their anchors on the position given them by the port pilot.

Thirty years ago, more than 8,000 tons of guano were taken annually, "worked" as they say down there, from these islands. And most of that was exported, generally in sailing ships—a cargo that would not spoil no matter how long the voyage—to England and the United States. Now, with the post-war development of sugar and cotton plantations along the neighboring coast from Paita down to Pisco, most of the guano stays at home to make the Peruvian fatherland fertile. Pisco cotton, with a very long staple, is said to be equal to the best Egyptian, and Peruvian sugar is fast reaching the point where it can meet import competition and also supply a sizable export to Chile.

Indeed guano has been more identified with the independent history of Peru—with the story of the country since winning its freedom from Spain in 1822—than any other commodity. In the time of Ramon Castilla, the first constitutional president, the government monopoly of guano brought an annual revenue of $15,000,000, a national asset which made it possible for Peru to pay off war loans, consolidate the internal debt, and begin national reorganization. In 1869 President Balta obtained a national loan in Paris secured by an export of 2,000,000 tons of guano which operated as a monopoly until 1871. In the present century, and notably since the World War, the increasing use of natural and synthetic nitrates has cut down the price of guano, while, during the war, the expanding markets for copper and nitrates determined the two chief sources of export wealth on the west coast.

But the I. B. W., serenly indifferent to human whims and vagaries, continues its colossal conventions even though their by-products have declined in world appreciation and economic value.

Today And Tomorrow

Excessive Partisanship As Bad Politics

THE UNBRIDLED partisanship against which George Washington so solemnly warned his countrymen in the Farewell Address is not only a danger to the State: It is also bad politics in an American Presidential election. I have followed closely eight Presidential elections, and I can think of no case where the winner got himself elected as the result of his attacks upon the loser.

In 1912 the attacker was Theodore Roosevelt, but with the Republican Party split, Wilson could not help being elected. In 1916 Hughes attacked and Wilson won. In 1920 the Democrats were as badly beaten before they started as were the Republicans in 1932; the smearing of the Wilson Administration in 1920, like the smearing of the Hoover Administration in 1932, only added an unnecessarily bad smell to a foregone conclusion. In 1924 Davis attacked and Coolidge stood on his dignity. In 1928 Al Smith attacked and Hoover floated in on the tide of prosperity. In 1936 Landon attacked and he was a badly defeated candidate before Roosevelt had even begun to campaign. In the only two instances, 1920 and 1932, when the winners have attacked the losers bitterly, it will be agreed, I think, that the winners would easily have won anyway.

THERE ARE VERY important practical reasons why bitter partisan attacks do not help to win Presidential elections. One reason is that while they please those who are already converted, they offend and repel those very voters who are most needed, the independent and hesitating voters. The very fact that these voters are undecided means that they see assets and liabilities in both candidates, and to come to them shrieking that one of the candidates is a rascal and a traitor, and what not, strikes them as a reflection upon their own judgment and character. If they were prepared to believe the worst of one candidate, they would not be undecided. If the hesitant voter thinks that there is much to be said for Brown and much to be said for Jones, you do not persuade him by bawling at him that there is nothing to be said for Brown, and that only a very bad citizen could fail to see that Brown is totally contemptible. Yet the bitter partisans never make votes, they have to persuade voters. They seem to think that they are getting results when they raise the temperature of their own followers from hot to boiling.

But that is not the only disadvantage in conducting a campaign by the method of bitter all-round attacks. There is also the fact that since any national party is composed of men and women with varying views and diverse interests, the blows of the attacker usually do as much damage among his own followers as among the opposition. That is why wise politicians, like Coolidge, to mention only those who have passed from the scene, make it their policy never to exacerbate the so-called "issues" of a campaign; they know only too well that on concrete measures of Government policy the lines of public opinion, of group and of sectional interest, do not coincide at all with party lines. In this campaign, for example, each party in turn has been hurt when it has sought to make an issue of foreign policy. These sharp issues are two-edged knives which cut both ways, and a seasoned politician who is talking to the Nation, and not merely to a like-minded local constituency, will not monkey with issues of this sort.

That, incidentally, is why politicians who have spent their political lives nursing one small constituency almost never know how to manage a Presidential campaign. They think that by emphasizing in each locality the issue which gets the most votes in that locality, they can assemble a national majority. But they forget that what they are saying in one place is, during a Presidential election at least, known in all the other places. So what happens is that while they are winning votes in one locality by appealing to a local opinion, they are losing them in other localities where people have a different opinion.

THERE ARE, of course, campaigns in which the result is a foregone conclusion. The tide of events is irresistible. But that is not true by any means of all campaigns. It was not true in 1916, in 1936 and is not in 1940. In a campaign where the result is not decided in advance by circumstances, the strategy of a campaign is very important, and my impression is that in a campaign of this type it is not the winner who knocks out the loser. It is the loser who defeats himself.

He does it usually by thinking that the more he denounces his opponent the more he enhances himself. That is not the way things work out. By the time the election campaign is under way the people already know all that can be said against both sides, and saying these things more vehemently does not make any difference. After Wilson had been in the public view every day for four years, nothing that Hughes could say about him in 1916 was new or really very interesting; what the individual voters and the somewhat disgruntled Democrats wanted to know about was Mr. Hughes, not Mr. Wilson, who was then an old familiar story. The same was true in 1936. They knew about President Roosevelt and the New Deal and they had had four years of hearing the pros and cons. But Mr. Landon was new and interesting and there was every disposition to hope that he was the man; in fact he probably had a popular majority with him when he was nominated. But Mr. Landon revealed nothing about Mr. Landon that won the hearts of the people when he went up and down the country saying all the things about Mr. Roosevelt that so many of us, as earnest newspapermen, had said so often that we had bored our readers to tears.

THE POLITICIANS and the hot partisans think the people feel as they do. The people do not. For the people as a whole are much less partisan than a visitor from Mars might think who reads the speeches and the editorial comment. The polls indicate, for example, that only a very small fraction of either party thinks the election of the other candidate would be a disaster. The great majority in both parties have their preferences, many have quite strong preferences, but they are not wringing their hands and tearing their hair. They keep their partisanship within sensible bounds and thus show themselves to be not only free men but also adult men.

Genuine Issues

IF THERE IS any royalty on ideas I must be running up quite a bill to the Democratic National Committee, for this is the second time that I have been needled to rebuttal by the daily press release of that agency.

This one says that "a thorough housecleaning is needed now and again in a political campaign just to clear up a few odd bits and shavings which pass for genuine issues."

I am thus reminded that it was Harold Ickes who officially took up the matter of Wendell Willkie's home address on Fifth Avenue as a political issue, and that while he was standing there, his potty abdomen shaking in mischievous mirth, his half-brick boomeranged and knocked him for a spiral. The very mention of Willkie's home address naturally directed attention to Ickes' home address, which is twofold, one being a country estate that really is an estate, a little outside, Washington, the other an old family home in Winnetka, Ill., in a neighborhood so socially highbusted that the very street on which he lives is described as "private road."

ICKES' REFERENCE to Willkie's home address plainly was intended to suggest that Willkie had a lot of money and to raise some question as to how he got it. He thus, unintentionally, conveyed a public invitation to himself to tell how he got his money, but he hasn't pursued either fork of the subject, for the fact is that, unless he has some very positive information that Willkie stole the rent for his Fifth Avenue apartment, then Willkie's method of acquiring money was at least as manly and as creditable by all the moral rules and social traditions by which Americans measure such things as Ickes' method.

Ickes didn't come out and say there was anything questionable about the Willkie method. He was dealing in some odd bits and shavings which, in the words of the Democratic National Committee, were intended to pass for genuine issues. By the same token, the question how Ickes got his money is not a political issue, either, but it is just as pertinent as the question of how Willkie got his. He isn't tongue-tied and people will listen whenever he decides to tell how Harold Ickes struck it rich.

NOW I SEE also, in the same press release of the Democratic National Committee, an Enright cartoon showing Willkie heaving something at a wall-eyed hound labeled "Utility Record," and saying, "You quit following me around."

That makes me ask, just as a scandal-loving member of the general public, what the Social-Democrats have got on Willkie that is so sinister as to justify this cartoon and why they don't let us in on the secret so that we can judge whether the man was a crook or not. And if he wasn't a crook, what is the idea of this cartoon, anyway? Especially from an outfit which decries insinuation and "odd bits and shavings" which "pass for genuine issues?" The mere fact that Willkie worked in the utility business, if he didn't do anything crooked, is nothing discreditable, and Willkie, far from concealing his employment in this line, has been campaigning as a believer in private industry and the employment of the American people in industries owned and operated by them, as stockholders, as opposed to the Social-Democrat or New Deal system, in which the Government eventually becomes the only employer and an order from the boss is a military command, enforceable by military law and force.

THESE CHIPS and shavings are not genuine issues, but the Social-Democrats insist on fighting that way, and their frequent mention of Willkie's downtown address always prompts the rejoinder that Franklin D. Roosevelt's address when he was a lawyer was just around the corner, and that right now the insurance firm of Roosevelt-Sargent, which is the firm of Jimmy and his mother, is at 111 Broadway, in the same part of town, which is to say the Wall Street section. Does that make crooks of the President and of Jimmy and his mother? If not, then how come it makes Willkie a crook?

I understand that this New Deal campaign copy is turned out under the supervision of old Charlie Michelson, and I insist that the fact of his employment at $20,000 a year as a "public relations consultant" by a big radio corporation having important dealings with the Communications Commission while he was constantly hanging around the White House and sitting in on the President's press conferences in a confidential role is no mere chip or shaving. That should be an issue in the campaign, because no big corporation should be allowed to post its press agent in the White House as observer or adviser of the President in his conferences with the daily press.

District Doldrums

By James D. Secrest

Three Important Bills Shelved

A total of 78 District bills have been passed by the Seventy-sixth Congress, of which 34 have been adopted at the current third session, a compilation by a clerk of the House District Committee disclosed yesterday. Of this number nine have been vetoed by the President and two are awaiting his signature.

While several other important local measures are pending before the Senate and House District Committees, there is no prospect of their being considered before an expected Congressional recess, and there is little likelihood that they will be enacted into law before the session ends.

These are the District reorganization bill, passed by the House and tied up for a month in the Senate District Committee; the District-Virginia boundary bill and the Dirksen amendments to the local income tax laws.

A report was current at the Capitol that the President may veto one of the two unsigned District bills. It would permit the retirement of police and firemen at half pay if they have had 30 years' service and reached the age of 55. The bill was amended in the Senate to include White House secret service aids, and it is understood to raise the prospective retirement pay of Col. Edmund W. Starling, chief of the White House detail.

The second measure, which is expected to be signed, sets up a new code for the regulation of fire, marine, and casualty insurance.

Among the major local bills passed by the third session of the present Congress are the following:

A liberalization of the District Unemployment Compensation Act, lowering the pay roll tax and increasing the employe benefits.

Amendment of the District income tax law to permit semiannual installment payments.

Acts for the regulation of dentistry and podiatry by professional boards.

Modernization of the indeterminate sentence and parole law.

The creation of a division for the recording and releasing of motor vehicle liens.

Reduction of interest on the WPA loans to the District government.

Most of the bills originated in the House. The three measures vetoed this year would have (1) given retirement pay to Amos Cole, a dismissed policeman; (2) set up a board of funeral directors for the regulation of undertakers; (3) and a direction to the Commissioners to supply water free of charge to certain charitable institutions. Six others were vetoed in 1939.

Burglars At Republican Headquarters

("Burglars rob Willkie Headquarters."—Headline.)

"Sh-hh-hh! . . . Take it easy!"

"Where are we anyhow?"

"I dunno. But let's take a look in that desk. What's in that top drawer?"

"Buttons . . . Willkie buttons."

"Try the second drawer. What's in that?"

"More buttons."

"What's in the bottom drawer? Don't tell me! . . . I know! . . . Buttons."

"What is it?"

"A cigar, a tumbler, a corkscrew and a clipping showing a Gallup poll."

"What's in the one below that?"

"An apple, a fountain pen, a telegram from Maine . . . and some more buttons."

"I'll take a look in this filing cabinet . . . Just look at this stuff . . . a Racing Form, a package of gum, a photo of Teddy Roosevelt at San Juan, some peanut shucks, an obit of Cal Coolidge and another Gallup poll clipping!"

"This is a fine place to pick for a robbery! What is this office anyhow?"

"I told you, I dunno. It just happened to be the one I picked first. But it must be a Republican's office."

"Imagine picking a Republican's office to rob. They ain't had nuthin' in eight years."

"There's a safe over there. There must be sumpin' in that."

"Sure . . . Buttons!"

"It ain't even locked."

"If you was a Republican you wouldn't need to lock a safe either."

"Lemme take a good look inside . . . For the luvvamike!"

"Whacha see?"

"Two golf clubs, four cans of beer, a photo of Herbert Hoover and a map of Washington."

"Why the map of Washington?"

"All Republicans have been away so long they'll need one."

"Here's a bunch of letters. We can tell what office this is from the address . . . Hey! . . . Look . . . This must be a Willkie campaign headquarters!"

"A helluva note! . . . Just a Willkie headquarters and we don't even find a dime. Come on!"

"Where?"

"Over to the Democratic headquarters."

"What for?"

"A Roosevelt button!"

The Jersey Hitler

WENDELL WILLKIE called Mayor Hague the "puny Hitler of Jersey City;" and Norman Thomas had publicized Hague in that role. Legislative committees have investigated him, opponents have denounced him. It remained for Dayton David McKean—who when teaching at Princeton was elected to the New Jersey State Assembly, later served as district director of the WPA and now teaches at Dartmouth—to assemble the whole record, paint the portrait of the man, and analyze the process by which such figures grow in America. He does the job, and does it well in "The Boss: Machine Politics in Action" (Houghton, $3).

Here is the record: An Irish immigrant's son, born in 1876 in a slum district of Jersey City, who was expelled from school as an incorrigible when, 14 years old, he was struggling through the sixth grade; worked briefly as a blacksmith's helper, then managed, also briefly, a prize-fighter; in 1897, aged 21, he was elected constable, and he has been on his city's pay roll ever since; for the last 23 years as mayor, and recently as dictator of his county, almost of his State. The highest salary paid him has been $8,000 a year, but he lives like a millionaire. His city, meanwhile, has one of the highest tax rates in the United States, and is all but bankrupt.

Hague calls his city "the most moralist city in America;" it has no red-light district and not even a taxi dance hall. He has given it an extravagant $25,000,000 medical center, but poor schools; in it, as he himself says, he is the law; he tells his police what to do and they act even in defiance of law. He has his city press tamed, and resents untamed visitors from across the river. His minions refuse to permit outsiders to inspect the pay rolls, which by law are public. His men on the State courts have blocked investigations by State commissions. Mayor Hague's Governor appointed Mayor Hague's son to the State Court of Errors and Appeals—although the boy in nine years' enrollment at three different colleges had not succeeded in earning even an A. B. Gov. Moore explained the strange appointment, made on Mayor Hague's birthday, as done to "make his daddy happy."

WHAT TALENTS and circumstances have combined to give this man his czar-like power? Mayor Hague, says Mr. McKean, has a ruthless will; he punches doctors, police officers and other hirelings in the face, and boasts of this form of discipline. He also has a phenomenal memory: he knows every block in his city, and most of their inhabitants. When a committee of businessmen dared to make the usual businessmen's complaint against high taxes, Mayor Hague arose and told each man what favors he had received from the organization, what relatives he had on the pay roll, what money he owed to banks in which the mayor was a stockholder or director, what violations of city codes were tolerated on his premises, and mentioned anecdotes which might be bad publicity. Then he put on his hat and walked out.

Both Republicans and Democrats will read with shame Mr. McKean's carefully factual account of Mayor Hague's successful technique in bargaining with a Republican machine in his State and in maintaining good relations with the New Dealers in Washington. He entered national politics as an ally of Al Smith and obtained his position of vice chairman of the National Democratic Committee in the John W. Davis campaign; he was so bitterly anti-Roosevelt in 1932 that he predicted that Mr. Roosevelt would not carry one State east of the Mississippi. But consistency has never been one of Mayor Hague's virtues; he made peace with the Roosevelt Administration in Washington and obtained favors from it, just as he did from the Republican Hoffman administration in New Jersey.

No political machine in America has ever functioned more smoothly; Hague's rule is, as Mr. McKean says, a sort of "brown bolshevism," and it has a national importance. It is, as he says, "a mirror in which other cities, and even the Nation, may see what they may become." Yet business, a large part of labor, the church and both party organizations have worked hand in glove with this local czar. Mr. McKean's book—which reveals the author as a good journalist as well as an educator—is a sobering book to read in these days, when we all talk so lightly about "the American way of life."

Progression of Events by New Deal

NO ONE STEP of the New Deal stands alone. Always it is related to steps that have preceded. And always it is related to steps that will follow. The whole of the New Deal, and each of the many processes which compose the New Deal—all have this automatic progression. The first step leads to the second, the second to a third, an so on to the end, which is inevitable.

Watching the progression, a question arises. As to any one of these sequences, was it deliberately planned from the beginning? Or did it happen by accident? Did the person who took one step foresee in advance that the other steps must follow? Or was the one step taken as a thing intended to stand alone, to meet a momentary condition, without foreseeing what must follow?

In hardly any case can this question be answered, fairly or surely. It is a question about motive, or lack of motive. And motive is something that goes on in a man's brain, impossible for an outsider to recognize, often not known to the man himself.

A TYPICAL case is the recent gesture, by some New Deal insiders which seemed to tend toward denying defense contracts to manufacturers against whom Labor Board findings are pending. That could have been planned, with awareness of its consequences. Or, it could have been the offhand idea of an individual having no vision of its consequences. Two journalists well informed about the New Deal, Messrs. Alsop and Kintner, think that the individual most responsible had a merely personal motive. The individual is Mr. Sidney Hillman, vice president of C. I. O. and member of the National Defense Advisory Commission. The journalists suggest that Mr. Hillman may have been moved merely to take a step which might elevate his standing with his labor organization.

But no matter about motive, or consequences. The consequences would have been automatic and inevitable. One consequence—certain, direct and immediate—would have been loss of Government contracts by many industries.

Denial of contracts would have been one more of many steps by the New Deal which make private industry difficult to operate. Difficulty of operation, imposed on private industry, leads to unemployment. And unemployment gives the New Deal opportunity to say, "since private industry is not giving work to these unemployed, Government must."

THAT CONDITION—expansion of Government employment accompanied by contraction of private employment—is itself a direct, automatic path toward socialism.

Again, contracting private industry could not produce enough taxes to support expanding Government employment. That would lead to unlimited Government borrowing. That, again, is a direct, automatic path toward socialism.

Whether such consequence were foreseen and intended by those who made the gesture toward denial of war contracts does not matter. No motive is here imputed. This incident is here used merely as an illustration of the automatic quality of the process, whether consciously intended or not.

BUT, TURNING to the board field, it is difficult not to surmise that some New Dealers have it consciously in mind to take advantage of the war situation to bring about something like practically universal Government operation of industry. One senses this from various evidences. One evidence is found in publications which often reflect New Deal inspiration. A journalist who frequently reflects the most inner and left wing part of the New Deal writes about "total war"—meaning the merger of every economic activity of the country into a great Government-directed machine. To the same effect, another New Deal reflector writing in the New Republic, says that:

"To many New Dealers, what is wrong about the arms program is . . . what they consider its fatally limited scope. They think that the program ought to go beyond mere procurement of armament, and should attempt to plan our whole economy."

THE LEFT wing New Dealers are extremely intelligent persons. With justice, they pride themselves on their ingenuity. They know how, if they wish, to bring about a technique of revolution by quiet methods, not accompanied by violence. Their leverage of power lies in their ability to create situations which lead President Roosevelt toward steps they desire. In the present case, if the intention exists, an early step would be to get control of the personnel engaged in preparation for defense, now made up in part of businessmen. That something like this is contemplated is suggested by Mr. Raymond Moley. Mr. Moley, though separated from his former intimacy with the New Deal, has means of knowing what goes on. He writes that the "New Dealers are getting ready to drive from Washington those experienced businessmen . . ."

Bygone Elections

By Paul N. Furman

War Hero For President

SLAVERY dominated politics in the elections of 1844 and thereafter until it was decided by secession, war and emancipation. After the annexation of Texas the South was bent upon gaining more territory from Mexico for the spread of slavery.

ZACHARY TAYLOR

The war was precipitated upon Mexico to obtain the land between the Nueces and Rio Grande, claimed by both Texas and Mexico. The President ordered Gen. Zachary Taylor to march to the Rio Grande and hold it as the south border of Texas.

AFTER THE battles of Palo Alto and Resaca de la Palma, he captured Monterey. When he crushed Santa Ana at Vera Cruz he made himself the Whig candidate for President.

Nomination came on the fourth ballot of the convention held in Philadelphia, June 7, 1848. The other main contenders were Henry Clay, of Kentucky; Gen. Winfield Scott, of New Jersey, and Daniel Webster, of Massachusetts. Millard Fillmore, of New York, was named for Vice President.

The Democrats assembled in Baltimore, May 22, 1848, organized the first National Committee ever chosen to manage a campaign. Lewis Cass, of Michigan, headed the ticket after four ballots. Gen. William O. Butler, of Kentucky, won second place.

SEVERAL smaller parties also entered the field in 1848.

Pennsylvania left the Democratic ranks in October and elected William F. Johnson, Whig, as Governor. Taylor had 1,360,101 popular votes; Cass, 1,220,544, and Van Buren, 291,263. Van Buren's purpose was to defeat Cass, which he did. In the Electoral College Taylor and Fillmore polled 163 votes to 127 for Cass and Butler. President Taylor died July 9, 1850, and Fillmore succeeded him.

Uniform Contract Plan to Be Studied

Uniform contracts to decrease the cost of construction in the District will be discussed by a committee of the Sub-Contractors Association of the District of Columbia with the Master Contractors Association, it was announced yesterday.

The plan, adopted by the subcontractors' organization this week, will be presented by a committee composed of Fred J. Rice, W. R. Carpenter and Joseph Daly.

Dr. Millis Named Umpire in Auto Labor Disputes

Detroit, Oct. 11 (AP).—A new era in labor relations for the automotive industry was hailed today following the appointment of a permanent umpire on labor disputes by the General Motors Corporation and the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers.

Fulfilling a clause in their contract signed last June, the union and corporation announced they had selected Dr. H. A. Millis, professor emeritus of economics at the University of Chicago, to act as a court of final appeal on specified points of difference.

Dr. Millis will have broad powers of action in deciding contradictory claims, even on such questions as working hours, strikes and stoppages, which are not settled by ordinary grievance procedure.

Wage rates and timing of operations, however, are specifically withheld from the umpire's jurisdiction.

Police Seek 206 N. Y. 'Moonshiners'

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—An eight-State police alarm was sent out today for 206 alleged members of a "Manhattan Moonshiners" ring charged with conspiring to defraud the Government of more than $3,650,000 in alcohol taxes.

Fourteen men were arrested in a pre-dawn raid by Treasury agents and police who smashed their way into what was ostensibly a downtown fruit and vegetable store concealing a still of 12,000 gallon capacity, one of the largest ever uncovered.

Fritz Kuhn Wins Right To Appeal as Pauper

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Fritz Kuhn, former leader of the German-American Bund, is "absolutely without funds" he said today in asking leave to appeal his conviction of stealing funds from the bund.

Kuhn, who is in Dannemora Prison serving a sentence of 2½ to 5 years, was granted permission to appeal, in the status of a pauper, by the appellate division of the State Supreme Court.

Gov. Horner Leaves $50,000 Estate

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—Gov. Henry Horner left an estate estimated at $40,000 in personal property and $10,000 in real estate, Herbert W. Lautmann, his attorney said today on filing the Executive's will for probate.

Horner's valuable collection of Lincoln mementoes, which was nationally known, was bequeathed to the Illinois State Historical Society.

Most of the estate was willed to relatives.

Good Posture Keeps Away Double Chin

Keep a Fine Carriage If You'd Maintain A Nice Throatline

By Ida Jean Kain

YOU MIGHT BE inclined to regard the appearance of a double chin as a penalty of age or perhaps a subdivision of weight. But it is more likely to be the price you pay for poor head carriage. When your head is perfectly balanced on your spine, the chin is level and there is no slack and no sag.

You may have a number of bad habits that contribute to chin troubles. When you read a book, do you hold your head over to the book instead of raising the book to a level with your eyes? Or perhaps you knit and become so absorbed in counting the stiches that you drop your chin. You may make an occasional determined effort to maintain perfect posture when you walk, but most the time you lead with your chin, and when the chilly winds blow you make matters worse by snuggling down into your furs. At night, if you prop your head high on a pillow the damage goes right on while you sleep.

Break Bad Habits

If you are to have a lovely throatline again, you will have to break your bad habits and hold your head beautifully at all times. Always remember that the line connecting the head and the shoulders in back should be as straight as possible.

In addition, you will have to undo the damage by stimulating the circulation and toning the skin and muscles. Exercise is the best circulation rouser there is—but precede it by massaging a good cream into the throat and leave the cream on while doing the exercises. Start with this resistance builder: Cup the chin in the hands with the fingers toward the ears. Very slowly force the head upward and back with the hands, resisting strongly with the muscles of the throat and jaw. Reverse it, and push forward with the chin as you resist with the hands. Relax the muscles gradually, letting the tension ebb out of them. Then repeat three times. After a few days, begin increasing the number of times until you repeat the exercise eight counts.

Erect Posture Helps

The second exercise will help to rout a dowager's hump on the back of the neck and straighten rounded shoulders as well as strengthen the throat muscles. Lie face downward on the floor with the legs straight down and together, the arms straight down and hands clasped behind the back. Very slowly raise the head and chest off the floor, contracting the back muscles and tipping the head backward as you pull up with the arms. Hold for a second, relax slowly, and repeat four times. Later on, increase the exercise to eight times.

Women's Literary Style Does Not Differ From Men's

The literary style of women today does not differ perceptibly from that of men, according to a study of the "Psychology of English" just issued by the Columbia University Press.

"It would be a bold analyst indeed, who would undertake to specify in what respects the English of Dorothy Thompson differs from that of Walter Lippmann or that of Virginia Woolf from that of Walter Pater and who would then generalize to a conclusion that sex differences in English are recognizable," is is declared.

Whatever differences exist are "random and indefinable," says the authors, Margaret M. Bryant, assistant professor of English at Brooklyn College, and Janet Rankin Aiken, of the English department at Columbia.

"Today it may be said that certain pieces of writing can be identified readily as feminine or masculine in their origin, but that these are on the whole the exception rather than the rule," it is explained. "The conclusion would rest as much on the subjects and literary treatment as upon grammar or vocabulary."

Furniture Shifting May Beautify Room Without Any Expense

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

Whether you haven't a nickle to spend but would like a change of scene, or have a tidy sum put by for refurnishings, consider what a world of difference a little furniture moving will make. Remember back to the days of the "parlor" with its little round center table with lamp and album on it? Then there were the early over-stuffed years when all the furniture hugged the walls for dear life. Now we've learned that any such arrangement is apt to be dull . . . the furniture and the plan of the room itself should dictate the arrangement. That leaves plenty of leeway for individuality, interest, style. The safest idea in the average room is to avoid extremes—not all furniture out from the wall, not all of it jammed up against the wall. In jiggling things around for a fresh effect, here are a few suggestions that may stimulate your decorative genius! Try:

A window arrangement with a spacious reading table in front of it with two comfortable easy chairs drawn up, one on each side.

A big over-size hassock, big enough to seat two or three, in the center of the room—a very hospitable gesture.

In the room with so many windows and doors that there's not enough wall space left, use a decorative screen as a background for a fastidious grouping of furniture.

If there isn't a fireplace to create a natural focal point, center the arrangement in a flower place, a picture window, a dramatic mirror or, if yours is a musical circle, give the grand piano the center of the stage, arranging the chairs and sofas as in an informal concert room.

Or take a console table and a pair of fine chairs and arrange them on a neglected wall if you'd like to bring distinction where it's most needed. Particularly if you have a handsome silver service to dramatize the grouping.

Although She Bore His Child, Girl Doggedly Refuses To Marry Man Who Killed Love When He Betrayed Her Trust; His Pleadings Drive Her to Ask Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Maybe if I tell you something of my childhood, it will help you to understand my present situation. I am the fifth child of a family of 12. My childhood was anything but happy. There was scarcely enough money for the bare necessities of life, and to make matters worse, my father drank excessively and went on rampages for weeks at a time. Naturally, very little love existed in such circumstances, and there were quarrels which left indelible marks in my mind.

My mother died when I was 12. I am now 18. We children separated and did not see each other very often. I was given a job after school in a private home. The lady was kind to me. I graduated from junior high school and was in high school when my world seemed to crumble around my feet.

I met a boy with whom I though I was deeply in love. He gave me devotion and happiness that I had never known in all my 17 years. There were dances, parties, swimming—everything one could think of. He was strong and handsome and kind. I was alone and lonesome. He was like a Prince Charming. I learned to love and trust him. We saw each other every night. I knew very little about sex, not having a mother or anyone I could talk to about the facts of life. Because I lacked such instruction, I was quickly swept off my feet and was to bear his child.

He wanted me to marry him at once. I was scared, hurt and miserable, so I refused to marry him. I told him I was not in love with him. I hated his love and kisses, and all the gay times we had had. Once I had faith in him; I trusted him. Now I had no faith in him and I couldn't trust him. How could I marry him? He said he loved me and that it didn't matter if I weren't in love; that we should think about the child. But still I would not marry him.

The lady I lived with was kind and understanding. She let me stay on with her, and advised me not to marry if I wasn't in love. The baby is now 9 months old and stays in a boarding home. I pay part of his board, and his father contributes $2 a week. He has seen the baby three times, but he doesn't go oftener because he says he doesn't like the lady who keeps the baby.

What I want to know is this: If I really loved this boy, would I be afraid to marry him? Is it possible to have his child and not love him? Is he right in saying we should be married, for the baby's sake, even if I don't love him? Would the past make it impossible for us to be happy together in future? And if he loved the baby, wouldn't he go to see him oftener, regardless of the lady? Do you advise me to marry him? Please answer soon.

UNHAPPY EIGHTEEN.

Girl's Firm Stand Shows Great Strength

DEAR UNHAPPY EIGHTEEN: Perhaps the best way to give you an understanding of your problem, and help you to arrive at an appropriate decision, is to answer your concluding questions in the order listed. 1. If you really loved this boy, you would marry him gladly. 2. It IS possible to have borne his child and yet not love him—for the reason that in precipitating the chain of events which resulted in the birth of his child, the young man killed the love you were beginning to feel for him.

3. His argument that you should get married, for the child's sake, even though you don't love the father, is difficult to rebut, since all the weight of worldly considerations (for yourself and the child) is behind it. But I think it is to your credit—and I construe it as proof of your essentially fine mind and character—that you steadfastly refuse to become his wife, since you don't love him and can no longer fully respect and trust him. There is great moral sense, a searching concept of justice to yourself and him, implicit in this heroic stand.

4. I think what happened in the past would (as you anticipate) make it impossible for you to be happy together in the future, in view of your sensitive and intuitively sound reaction to the implications of his "betrayal;" and the word "betrayal" fits exactly here.

Just when you were beginning to cross the threshold into that priceless shared experience of inexpressible mutual appreciation and loftiest mutual consideration—which humankind calls "love," and which is a relationship of orderly, progressive, controlled development—the boy took advantage of your absolute trust (and trust is a concomitant of pure love in all its stages), to give premature vent to his sexual feelings.

In so doing, he destroyed forevermore the spiritual components of your budding love of him. He violated not only your trust but your dignity as a person; he wounded your self-respect and blighted your faith in him. And he left you with child; conferred upon you a burden of the most cruel kind. He did all this in the name of his "love" of you. Small wonder you shrink from the memory of his past "love," and the thought of his future "love." Small wonder you cannot support the prospect of becoming his wife—even though, to some commentators, it might seem an expediently desirable face-saving arrangement.

For you, he has become the symbol of careless or merciless carnality; of all that is opposed to love as you had rightly conceived it to be. And since instinct has to do with a self preservative sixth sense, I should say that in refusing, obstinately and instinctively, to commit yourself to any further relationship with him, you are fighting to retrieve and develop your own spiritual potentialities, which he once carelessly trampled and would now disregard.

5. If he loved the baby, he would call upon him as often as humanly possible, "regardless (as you say) of the lady." And if the lady displeased him, as his son's caretaker, he would move heaven and earth to find a more prepossessing foster-mother. Furthermore, he would assume a larger share of the baby's support than a mere $2 a week, if he unselfishly loved either of you. I think his perfunctory interest in the baby is merely an offshoot of his frustrated emotional interest in you.

6. I don't advise you to marry him. I congratulate you on the far sighted, clear headed, aspirational gallantry of your stand since your illusions were shattered. I urge you to retain your faith in yourself, and your belief in the trustworthiness of some fine men, in spite of this adolescent tragedy—which was certainly your misfortune and not your fault. I wish for you an unsmirched happiness in marriage to a worthier man than this one proved to be; and I believe, if you keep your heart and head high, your purpose firm, and your nature unafraid and unembittered, you will yet fulfill that wish.

Crab Meat Salad Featured at Tea Room Opening

WE ALL know we should eat salads for health because they are rife with vitamins and minerals that are so good for us. But there is a new reason in Washington for eating this type of food that has come in for so much dietetic encomium. The reason is the Green Brier Garden, which was opened yesterday at a luncheon given by Julius Garfinckel & Co. for members of the press.

It will be like June in January anytime the woman shopper stops in at the Green Brier Garden for a custom-made luncheon, or the tea hour. In this attractive setting gay with color in the modern manner, the emphasis is on salads and efficiency.

The guests at the opening luncheon had the following selection from which to choose their lunch—a medley of fresh vegetables with French tomato dressing for the vegetarian minded; crabmeat salad in tomato cups with Thousand Island dressing; ham surprise with vegetable macedoine—each vegetable reposing in its own lettuce nest; chicken salad with a garnish of capers, hard-cooked egg and parsley, and intriguing fruit salad that was a medley of avocado pear, grapefruit, orange and endive, served with Roquefort dressing.

My selection was the crabmeat salad in tomato cups with Thousand Island dressing. I enjoyed it so much that I obtained the recipe which is as follows:

Crabmeat Salad in Tomato Cups

Prepare tomato cups as follows: Wash tomatoes. Peel them by rubbing the surface of ripe tomatoes with the back of a knife, then pulling off the skin with a knife, or immerse the tomatoes in boiling water for two minutes. Drain them and skin them. Hollow the tomatoes and sprinkle the hollows with salt. Invert the tomatoes to drain for 20 minutes. Chill them and fill the hollow with crabmeat salad made as follows:

Flake 2 cups of crabmeat and dice 1 cup celery hearts. Chill these ingredients. Marinate lightly with French dressing. When ready to serve, combine with 1 cup of Thousand Island dressing. Season with salt and paprika if desired. Serve on lettuce and garnish with pimiento, olives and radishes. Eight servings.

The dessert wagon of garden appearance, decorated in white and red diamonds, was one of the highlights of the luncheon. The guests selected their dessert as the cart was wheeled to their tables.

Foot Grooming Pays Dividends

A pedicure still is something of a luxury. But good grooming for your feet pays dividends in greater foot comfort as well as in charm.

When you bathe, use a brush to scrub your heels and toes. That helps to prevent and remove callouses. A still better way to get rid of callouses is rub them nightly with pumice stone. Follow the rubbing with a gentle massage. And if your feet tire easily, start giving them a nightly rub with a metholated cream, after your bath.

Be sure to file your toenails straight across because that helps to prevent them from splitting and ingrowing. You should smooth the edges with the fine side of the emery stick. After soaking the feet in warm water and drying them with a soft towel, push the cuticle back with a bit of cotton wrapped about the end of an orange stick. Then rinse the feet and wipe the toes again to remove any excess cuticle. Now you're ready to glamourize your toes with polish.

A Woman's Washington

Flat Furniture Advised to Save Dusting Labor

THE MODERN housewife does not want to spend her days dusting ornamental knobs and curlecues which contribute nothing to the usefulness of her furniture. At any rate, that's how his fiancee feels, says Director Fred Wallace, of the National Craft Training Center, and he bears it in mind as he designs and builds the furniture for the Buckingham Village Apartment they will occupy after their December wedding. "All the pieces have flat plane surfaces which can be dusted in no time," he explains. "Also, since we'll probably move as frequently as everyone else in Washington, I have designed the larger pieces so that they come apart in sections and can be carried easily."

His favorite brainchild is a combination china cupboard and dining-room table. The table, when not in use, slides out of the way to form the front panel of the cupboard. He encourages his students at the Training Center to follow his severely functional theories. "They make what they need, whether it is a salad bowl or a living-room chair," he says. "I will not allow a woman to build a whatnot, for example. What is a whatnot but a dustcatcher designed to hold other dustcatchers?"

A woman who has no delusions of grandeur stopped at the Chinese laundry around the corner to pick up her husband's shirts. The package was ready, but the shop's proprietor disapproved of her carrying it home herself. "You're a LADY," he explained, bowing deferentially.

A member of the National Defense Commission's staff started out last spring with a fair-sized office of her own. As the staff grew larger, her share of the office shrank to one-half, then to one-sixth the original space. Nowadays when she has a particularly complicated report to prepare, she and her secretary seek breathing space in a stairwell. The only difficulty is that as she dictates each phrase, a sonorous echo sends it bouncing back at her.

Cotton Ticking To Appear in Summer Frocks

FASHION NOTE—Last spring a New York department store found itself with a surplus of cotton ticking. In order to dispose of the material, it instructed its designers to work out something—anything—that could be made up in ticking. The result was a new line of sportswear, including jumpers, skirts, slacks and shirts. The outfits sold as fast as they reached the counter, and by next spring you may have difficulty distinguishing your plumper friends from their pillows.

Wash Food Covers

The oil silk or fabric food covers for the refrigerator should be kept as clean as the bowls used for the foods. Give the covers a thorough soapy bath in warm water and rinse in warm water and then in cold. Wipe as dry as possible and hang out until perfectly dry. Do this weekly.

Bachelor Ranks Lose Henry Villard As He Marries in South Carolina

State Department Official Marries Tamara Gringutes

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ONE OF WASHINGTON'S popular bachelors became a Benedict in Charleston, S. C., yesterday afternoon when Harry Villard, of the State Department, and Miss Tamara Gringutes were married. The Rev. George N. Edwards of the Circular Congregational Church officiated at the rites at 5:30 o'clock. There were no attendants.

The bride appeared in a powder blue suit trimmed in blue fox, worn with a matching blue hat and a corsage of white orchids. She and her husband will go from Charleston to Sea Island, Ga., today to spend some time. Upon their return to Washington they will live in Mr. Villard's recently purchased home at 3335 Dent Place, Georgetown. Incidentally, that's next door to the house leased for the winter by E. Kenneth Jenkins, whose marriage to Miss Mary Louise Marsh also took place yesterday afternoon.

Bride From Faculty Of Madeira School

The former Miss Gringutes is the daughter of Mme. Marta Gringutes and the late Semion Gringutes. Born in St. Petersburg, she and her parents fled from there in 1917 along with scores of other White Russians and went to China to make their home. She studied in an English convent there and later continued her education at universities in Munich and Dresden and at the Sorbonne. In 1936, she was graduated from the University of Rome, and for the past two years she has taught languages at the Madeira School.

The romance that culminated in the marriage yesterday began last July when Miss Gringutes was seeking a radio job. Andrew Wylie, of Washington, suggested that Mr. Villard might help her and a meeting was arranged. She is still very much interested in radio and hopes to continue her work along that line this winter.

Mr. Villard is the son of Harold G. Villard, of New York and the late Mrs. Villard, and is a nephew of Oswald Garrison Villard, noted liberal editor. He attended Harvard and Magdalen College, Oxford, and drove an ambulance with the Italian Army in the World War.

Has Followed Varied Career

Since then, his career has been both colorful and varied. He taught for a time at the Thacher School in California; was a newspaperman for a while and had a fling as an extra in Hollywood.

In 1928, Mr. Villard entered the foreign service, and later was assigned to duty in Teheran, Caracas, and Rio de Janeiro. Last July he resigned from the foreign service to become Assistant Chief of the State Department's Division of Near Eastern Affairs.

Mrs. Villard has several sisters, one of whom is Mrs. L. D. McGregor, wife of Lieut. McGregor, U. S. N. The others live in Europe.

Hope Blandy And Lieut. Lee Wed at Yuma

Couple Seizes Chance When Bridegroom's Ship Returns to U. S.

Romance can be hectic these days if the bridegroom is a Navy man attached to the fleet. Capt. and Mrs. W. H. P. Blandy, U. S. N., have just received a telegram telling of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Hope Gilmour Blandy, to Lieut. John Marshall Lee, U. S. N., on Thursday in Yuma, Ariz.

Arthough the wedding was scheduled for next June, the couple decided to marry this week when it was learned the fleet would put in at California for a few days. The bride flew to California, where they were to be wed immediately. However, the 3-day marriage law in California sent their plans awry again. Undaunted, the couple took a plane to Yuma, Ariz.

Lieut. Lee's ship will sail for Honolulu on Monday and his bride plans to follow him out to the islands shortly, if nothing prevents her.

The former Miss Blandy is well known in service circles here, where she made her home. She gave up ideas of a debut several years ago to pursue her studies in fashion designing at the Coburn School in New York. She was graduated from the English School in Rio de Janeiro, where her father was stationed as naval attache of the American Embassy for several years. Mrs. Lee also attended the Mills College and George Washington University. Lieut. Lee, who is attached to the U. S. S. Boise, was graduated from Annapolis.

Mary Marsh, E. Kenneth Jenkins Wed at Home of Bride's Uncle

Relatives, Only, Present at Ceremony, But Friends Throng F Street Club for Reception Later; Couple to Reside in D. C.

At a quiet ceremony yesterday Miss Mary Louise Marsh became the bride of E. Kenneth Jenkins, of Warrenton, Va. The Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce officiated at the home of the bride's uncle, Edward Gardner, at 2450 Belmont street. Only relatives witnessed the wedding, but a sizable section of Washington and Virginia society gathered later at the 1925 F Street Club for the reception that began at 4:30 o'clock, and was still in progress three hours later.

The bride, who has made her home with her uncle for a number of years, originally came here from Pittsburgh. She attended the Madeira school, later made her bow to Washington society, and has been a popular member of the Capital's smart set for several seasons.

Mr. Jenkins and the former Miss Marsh had no attendants. The bride was gowned in floor length white crepe, styled on Moyen Age lines with long sleeves, and a narrow band of seed pearls and gold braid outlining the neckline and the fitted bodice. A short tulle veil becomingly arranged over her blond hair, and a bouquet of mixed orchids completed her costume.

Also Anniversary For the Roberts

After the wedding, the couple went to the 1925 F Street Club to welcome the throng of guests who called to drink their health. In the company were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, who were celebrating their fifth wedding anniversary and who centered the spotlight almost as much as the bride and bridegroom. A number of those present recalled that shortly after Chip and Evie were married, back in 1935, Edward Gardner gave a cocktail party for them, having among his guests many who were there to enjoy yesterday's reception.

Somebody in the crowd mentioned, however, that Chip and Evie turned up missing at the party given five years ago in their honor, having flown off suddenly to Atlanta. Amusing telegrams were sent back announcing that they would not be present then. However, they were very much on hand yesterday, as were Mrs. Ffoulke Dewey, Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken, Mrs. Waggaman Pulver, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Roberto Mendoza, Mrs. Kent Legare and several dozen others, including many from the Virginia hunt country, where Mr. Jenkins has had a home for a number of years.

To Make Home On Dent Place

The gay get-together continued long after Mr. Jenkins and his bride left on their honeymoon trip. For traveling the former Miss Marsh had chosen a gray suit, cut on simple lines and trimmed with beaver. A brown hat, matching accessories and an orchid corsage accented her ensemble. Upon their return to Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins will make their home at 3333 Dent Place.

Mr. Jenkins, a son of Edward E. Jenkins, of Warrenton, is known as a sportsman. His first wife, the former Miss Betty Willetts, obtained a divorce from him several months ago in Reno. They were married in 1934 at St. Bartholomew's Church in New York.

D. A. R. History Traced In Jubilee Pageant

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

A program depicting the history of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, was presented last night before an audience that filled Constitution Hall, closing the three-day celebration of the organization's golden jubilee.

Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, in the first part of the presentation portrayed the first president of the society, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, wearing a gown which was a replica of that in the portrait of Mrs. Harrison hanging in Constitution Hall. Later she assumed her official role as the head of the society in its fiftieth anniversary year.

In the final episode, in which the work of the D. A. R. was brought up to date, four pages, Miss Martha Norris, Miss Thelma LeBar Brown, Mrs. Virginia M. Lambert and Miss Sarah H. Hawkes, turned the leaves of a great book as Mrs. Robert briefly sketched each department of activity and its scope.

Throughout the program, there was music appropriate to the period sung by Norman Cordon, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, accompanied by Charles Kriz. There was also a number by the Maryland University Men's Glee Club, assisted by Mr. Cordon and Harlan Randall.

A concert by the United States Marine Band Orchestra, led by Andrew G. Bodnar, preceded the program and Winfred Kemp, principal musician of the band, played a cornet solo.

Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, of Chicago, librarian general, had the role of narrator. In the opening scene she quoted Gen. George H. Shields, who presided over the first Continental Congress of the society and urged that every American citizen "honor his country's Flag by standing" when the "Star-Spangled Banner" was sung. In the resolution to this effect, passed by the society then, this custom with regard to the song had its beginning.

The audience stood as Mr. Condon sang two verses. He was presented as not only a distinguished American artist but "the husband of a member whose family has given to the society several of its most loyal workers and national officers."

The first episode was designated as "The First Decade." National officers, in costume, represented the founders. Mrs. John Logan Marshall, of South Carolina, portrayed Mrs. Mary Virginia Cabell; Miss Page Schwarzwaelder, of New York, Mrs. Ellen Hardin Walworth; Mrs. Frank Leon Nason, of Massachusetts, Miss Eugenia Washington; Mrs. George D. Schermerhorn, of Michigan, Mrs. John W. Foster; Mrs. Loren Edgar Rex, of Kansas, Mrs. Adlai Stevenson; Mrs. Willard Steele, of Tennessee, Mrs. Daniel Manning, and Mrs. William Kennedy Herrin, of Mississippi, Miss Mary Desha.

The second episode dealt with the building of Memorial Continental Hall. In this Mrs. George Hamilton Stapp, State regent of Maryland, took the role of Mrs. Charles W. Fairbanks; Mrs. Julius Y. Talmage, of Georgia, Mrs. Donald McLean; Miss Marion D. Mullins, honorary State regent of Texas, Mrs. Matthew T. Scott.

The World War period was depicted by Mrs. John S. Heaume, of Ohio, as Mrs. William Cummings Story; Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, of the District, as Mrs. George Thatcher Guernsey; Miss Mullins as Mrs. Matthew T. Scott; Mrs. Robert J. Johnston, of Humbolt, Ia., vice president general, as herself; Mrs. Leland Stanford Duxbury, of Minneapolis, as Mrs. Mary Smith Lockwood.

The period of the building of Constitution Hall required only two persons to represent those who were leaders then. Mrs. Haig portrayed Mrs. Guernsey and Mrs. Samuel Campbell, of Illinois, represented Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook. All of the others were themselves; Mrs. George Maynard Minor, Mrs. Grace L. H. Brosseau, Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, Mrs. Russell William Magna and Mrs. William A. Becker.

Text of Willkie's Boston Address

He Says Democratic Traditions Must Be Strengthened

By the Associated Press

Boston, Oct. 11.—The text of Wendell Willkie's speech here tonight follows:

I have been traveling through your New England countryside, talking to the people of this older part of America. I have just come from a trip through the West. No one can travel through our Western land without being moved by the great future of this country. No American can come into New England without being as deeply moved by the ideas and values that made this country great.

It was here in Boston that the idea of the American Republic was born. Here in New England, men forged the first strong links in the chain of ideas and events that set our people free.

Today the ideas of individual freedom, of human rights and democratic government are being challenged throughout the world. Let me say with deep sincerity that we have yet fully to meet that challenge.

In our generation we have neglected those values and precepts that make democracy strong. We have come to have a cynical attitude toward life. We have neglected the spiritual forces that made us a great people—confidence in ourselves and humble reverence before God.

Sacred Responsibility

I think we have lost one quality that we most desperately need. It is a sense of responsibility. Each of us, young and old, has responsibilities that he must fulfill if this Nation is to be strong.

We are the last great democracy. Every man and woman in America has a sacred responsibility to exercise that right.

We must demand an equal sense of responsibility in the government that we elect to office in November. The burden which that government will carry is almost beyond the measure of men.

The history of the world will be determined by the way that government meets its responsibilities to the American people.

If we have an irresponsible government in Washington during the next four years, I believe that democracy will fall. And if democracy falls in America, it will perish from the earth.

But if we elect a responsible government, I believe—I know—that democracy will be saved.

Democratic Traditions

What are the responsibilities that face the next Administration? Obviously, we cannot list them all tonight. But I want to talk about a few of them—the most important ones.

First of all, I see the responsibility of upholding our democratic traditions. In a hostile world we must not attack or violate them. We must seek to strengthen them.

The candidate of the New Deal has chosen this most critical time to violate one of our oldest traditions. He is violating a principle that was framed by George Washington. He is seeking to perpetuate himself in office.

And what reason does he give for this? Does he tell you that there are more jobs than there were four years ago?

Oh, no. He says that Hitler and Mussolini would like to see him [illegible] this coming November.

[illegible]eckless Act

He does not say this directly. He does not dare to say it for quotation. He says it by reading aloud a dispatch from Rome. He hints at it. He insinuates it. He leaves the real job to his hand-picked Vice President and his hand-picked Governor of New York.

Dragging the European war into our domestic elections is not a responsible act. It is a reckless one.

Do you care what Hitler thinks or what Mussolini thinks?

Are you going to take either of those gentlemen into the voting booth with you next November?

No one in America has any use for those men except the third-term candidate. He thinks they can win for him.

And what shall be said of the embarrassment caused to millions of Italian-American citizens? Naturally they love their old homeland. But they don't want its affairs dragged into the elections in this new home in America.

American Issues

They have a right to vote just like anybody else. But they don't want to vote on European issues. They want to vote on American issues.

It is the responsibility of government to meet the American issues. I have sought to meet them frankly and openly.

I shall continue to meet them, and I shall continue to lay them before the people.

It will be the responsibility of the next Administration to protect the American standard of living. Without that standard, democracy cannot survive.

The next administration must guarantee relief to everyone who can't get a job. It must see to it that the old people are adequately taken care of. It must continue the social security program, and even extend it.

It must protect the rights of labor. It must stand by the National Labor Relations Act. One way to stand by that act is to get a labor board that will administer the law in the interests of industrial peace and the unity of labor.

Creating New Jobs

Those are obvious responsibilities. But you and I know that a real sense of responsibility toward the unemployed, toward the old people, and toward labor, involves something more than laws and good resolutions.

It involves the making of jobs: Jobs on private—not public—pay rolls.

I can make jobs. I have been employed for many years for the very purpose of creating jobs.

If I didn't know I could make jobs I wouldn't even run for a first term.

The only jobs the New Deal has made in the last four years are Government jobs. But we in America do not believe that the way to open up the future is to go on the public pay roll.

For eight years they have been telling us that America is a land without a future. We, the people, know better. America has a future and we are going to make it a good one.

Stay Out of Europe

But—all around us the world is at war. All around us a hostile system of government has grown up. The three most powerful dictator states have made an alliance against us.

The next administration will bear the awful responsibility of keeping us at peace.

We can have peace. But we must know how to preserve it.

To begin with, we shall not undertake to fight anybody else's war. Our boys shall stay out of Europe.

But we shall appease no one. We stand for our democratic institutions and we stand ready to defend them with our lives.

How then shall we stay out of war and avoid appeasement? There is only one way. We must build ourselves an air force, a Navy and an Army so strong that no dictator will dare to tamper with our commerce, our interests or our rights.

That is the defense program we must have.

Plenty of Talk

I have spoken often of defense in this campaign. I have pointed out that in 1936, nearly five years ago, the present Administration told you it would build an "adequate" defense system. Since then the third-term candidate has spoken urgently many times. Yet that adequate defense system does not exist.

It takes at least two years to build an army of even 750,000 men. It takes seven years to build a two-ocean navy. But the Administration sarted off by taking five years just to talk about it.

At that rate we shall never get any defense—on time.

We have plenty of talk, but few tanks, plenty of plans, but few planes.

Let me give you just one example.

On September 1, 1939, the invasions of free countries commenced. In the fall of that year the War Department submitted its estimates to the Bureau of Budget.

Seriously Delayed

That is an executive bureau. It advises the President. The responsibility for the budget estimates is his. The President had been making speeches about the necessity for defense. And yet he cut more than half a billion dollars from the War Department's requests.

He did this when the very calamity he warned against was happening.

He seriously delayed the defense program. He delayed the procurement of tools, clothing, and even essential medical supplies. Work on the five coast defense batteries had to be abandoned. Work on Government arsenals, looking two years ahead, was prevented.

Our marines were deprived of important items of equipment. A request for ammunitions—one of our greatest deficiencies—was cut down. The air pilot training program was cut. The construction of a vital new drydock had to be put off.

The American people want those things. They are in a great hurry for them. Unless they get them, and get them quickly, their future is in danger.

I say that this is irresponsible government.

And I say that we cannot afford to have that kind of government any longer. We must have the kind of government that gets things done.

None of us is so simple as to think that Hitler is planning at this moment to send an expeditionary force across the Atlantic to attack us.

What Hitler Thinks

Yet none of us is so blind as to deny that he has designs on us. We know—he has said so many times—that he hates democracy. He is aware that if we can really make democracy strong here in America, his own system of blood and tyranny cannot forever survive.

And what does he think about this? Listen to Mr. Hitler's mouthpiece—his minister of propaganda, Dr. Joseph Goebbels. This is what Goebbels said. I quote:

"The America of today will never again be a danger to us. Nothing will be easier than to produce a bloody revolution in the United States. No other country has so many social and racial tensions. We shall be able to play upon many strings there."

That's what Hitler thinks.

Now let's see about that.

When he said that, Hitler's propaganda minister must have been reading the propaganda of the New Deal. He wasn't reading the character of the American people.

We are a people of many races and creeds, but we are proud of that.

There are no racial tensions in America such as divided the people of Europe.

Internal Tensions

No matter where our parents may have come from—regardless of race, creed, or color—we are Americans now and always.

We picked this country for our own. We will keep it for our own. We have no racial tensions.

But how about the social tensions of this minister of propaganda? Well, the New Deal has been trying to tell us for eight years that we are divided by social tensions.

And what is the triumphant outcome of its efforts? It has succeeded in convincing Dr. Goebbels.

Internal tensions have weakened all the democracies that have recently fallen. Their own internal discord rendered them powerless to decide, powerless to produce, powerless to defend themselves.

Some of that discord was created deliberately by German agents. They are trying to do it here.

At this very moment Nazi agents are going about this country, spreading propaganda, seeking to entrap American businessmen by the lure of commercial profit.

England Awoke to Dangers

And what is the New Deal doing about that?

But the thing that really weakened the democracies was their failure to solve their own internal problems. They lacked the unity of heart and of effort that would have saved them.

Even mighty England was endangered by internal discord. It was not until Norway collapsed that the British people awoke to their real danger—the danger from within. Then England put a strong man at the head of her government.

I pray God that Winston Churchill did not come too late.

I am resolved—and I know that you are resolved—to do everything in our power to strengthen those heroic British people.

But tonight we must solemnly undertake to achieve unity ourselves. We must bring America together. We must come together with a full understanding of what is at stake for our democratic institutions. We must work with each other and for each other, to make our democracy strong.

We cannot do this with an irresponsible government. We cannot do this with a government that divides us into classes. We cannot do this with a government that defies dictators while it neglects defense. We cannot do it with a government that appeases Communists by putting them on the Federal pay roll.

Right to Elect

There is only one way to achieve unity.

We must have in office a government with a sense of duty—duty to the people of America, to our democratic institutions, our prosperity, and our need for defense.

We must elect such a Government. We have still the right to elect. Let us elect it.

Under our American system national elections are held only once every four years. Today, events are moving with incredible speed. Four years from now we may be living in a very different world. Four years from now it may be too late.

An hour of critical decision is upon us, not next year, nor the year after—but this year—now.

We must take our stand if we are to preserve this precious democratic way of life. We must become a responsible people with a responsible Government.

As in Lincoln's day, a house divided against itself cannot stand.

As he said:

"We must nobly save or meanly lose the last best hope on earth."

Draft to Spare Family Men, Hershey Says

Tells Board of Trade Deferment 'Abuses' Won't Be Tolerated

Lieut. Col. Lewis B. Hershey, acting national selective service director, last night assured 1,500 Board of Trade members the American family group would be spared in the draft but warned "abuse" of the deferment regulations would not be tolerated.

Speaking at the business organization's first general meeting of the year at the Willard Hotel, Hershey asserted "every possible care" will be taken by selection board members to protect family units.

There will probably be a "high percentage of incidental deferments," he declared, indicating the bulk of men excused from military training will be for dependency reasons.

The selection chief also promised local boards would call no man essential to important defense industries, but added:

"But we must preserve a nicety of balance" between military and civilian interests. "Abuse (of deferment policies) will react against the regulations" and bring force of public opinion squarely against the peacetime manpower call, Hershey declared.

Needed Men Must Go

Serving notice that the armed forces will guard against injury to defense enterprises, the mobilization expert nevertheless asserted that "no man stays behind that can't be spared" by the Army.

The selection leader took the occasion to call on the Board of Trade members, many of whom have been designated registration and local board officials, to give their utmost support to the selection machinery.

"Success on Wednesday and the days after depends on you," he declared.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington selection chief, seconded Hershey's call for civilian support of selective service and coupled it with an appeal in behalf of the Red Cross.

Had there been "more organization like the Red Cross—not a military organization but a Christian organization—the terrible crisis that faces humanity today would not exist."

No Better Way

And "you can help humanity in no better way than by giving the small mite of $1 for a membership," he added.

P. Y. K Howat, chairman of the traffic committee, reviewed the unit's program and the work of a traffic survey undertaken with the backing of the Bureau of Public Roads and the District government.

Conclusions of the survey, so far three-fourths completed, led to a three-point program involving measures for child safety, solution of the parking problem, and a reorganized taxicab system, he said.

As a result of committee efforts four downtown garages with space for 880 cars each have been built, two others capable of housing 450 autos are under construction, and three more with facilities for 2,000 cars apiece are being considered, Howat asserted.

A child safety campaign will be pushed in District schools, he said, and the committee has sponsored underpasses at Scott, Dupont Circles and at Fourteenth Street and Maine Avenue. Members are also studying proposals for a system of traffic islands to expedite the cross-town flow.

Protestants Send Jews Felicitations

D. C. Jews Observing Day of Atonement; Receive Felicitations

Washington Jewry's Yom Kippur celebration last night struck a historical interfaith-strengthening note, as a Protestant clergy group's felicitations were read from the pulpit of the Washington Hebrew Temple, principal seat of the reformed observance.

Meanwhile, thousands of prayer-shawled Jews assembled at sundown in orthodox and conservative synagogues to hear the Kol Nidre sung by white-garbed cantors. The congregations' lay leaders stood by bearing the Torah, laws of Moses, later returned to its holy place in the Ark of the Covenant.

Earlier in the day, candles—symbolizing the soul as God's flame—flickered in Jewish homes throughout the city, as families sat down to their last meal before beginning the 24-hour fast.

"Jews and Christians alike recognize the reality of sin and the need for atonement based upon the petition for God's forgiveness and man's request for forgiveness by man," said the Protestant message, in part, read by Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, spiritual leader of the Temple, and signed by Dr. Seth R. Brooks, pastor of the Universalist National Memorial Church and secretary of the Washington Ministerial Union.

"Together many followers of Judaism and Christianity stress the world need for humility, sacrifice, forbearance and forgiveness," concluded the message, to which Rabbi Gerstenfeld responded on behalf of the rabbis of Washington.

Expresing their "deep appreciation of the profound spiritual comradeship your beautiful Day of Atonement message reveals," the rabbis said it is "our common religious vision of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man that has built the best that is in America."

"It is the same vision that will lead our country from strength to strength and help this sad world to find healing for its tragic ills. May God guide us to keep America a stronghold of God's peace and a flaming prophetic sign to all men of a world of righteousness that is to come."

Joining with Rabbi Gerstenfeld in signing the reply were Rabbis Solomon H. Metz, Adas Israel Synagogue; Harry Silverstone, Tifereth Israel; Moshe H. Levinson, Beth Sholom; Zemach Green, Ohev Sholom; Jacob Dubrow, Kesher Israel; Joshua Klavan, Talmud Torah; Henry Segal, B'nai Israel; Aaron Volkman, Beth El; Arthur Bogmer, Ezras; Chaim Williamofski, Southeast Hebrew Congregation, and Hugo Shiff, Beth El Temple, Alexandria, Va.

Rabbi Silverstone Preaches

The essential quality and test of humanity is the manner of living in the society of others, Rabbi Harry Silverstone said last night in his Yom Kippur sermon at Tifereth Israel Synagogue, Fourteenth and Euclid Streets Northwest.

Declaring that "the rich and poor alike should strive to make their niche better because of their occupancy," the speaker added:

"Unfortunately, there are those bereft of social insight, who belong to the group which Prime Minister Churchill has widely designated as 'willfully wicked men,' interested in bringing destruction to all others as long as it will advance their purposes."

Guest Will Preach

Grays Reelect Chief in Final Tense Session

Fists Are Clenched And Names Called As Howell Insists Women Leave Room

In a final hectic session—marked by name-calling and threats of violence—the United Confederate Veterans yesterday brought their golden jubilee reunion to a close by reelecting their commander in chief and voting to continue annual meetings as long as "two of us can get together."

A bitter and stormy battle over the coveted post of commander in chief finally ended with 94-year-old Gen. Julius Franklin Howell, of Bristol, Va., remaining in office by a margin of one vote—but not until one candidate had angrily withdrawn and another thought he was elected and started to make an acceptance speech.

Earlier in the day, in contrast to the hostile atmosphere of the election session, the fading remnants of Gen. Lee's Army of the Confederacy paraded proudly along Constitution Avenue, their famous "rebel yell" echoing above the martial music of six bands.

They rode in cars past the reviewing stand where city officials and high ranking military officers watched—that is, all but two, who insisted on riding horseback. A few others remained in their Willard Hotel rooms, conserving energy for the fiery elections.

Gen. Howell called the final meeting soon after the parade was over. Long before he arrived to start the proceedings, the old warriors, sensing a battle, had drawn their chairs close to the speakers' rostrum, waiting grimly for things to start. Several doffed their coats.

They knew what to expect because a previous meeting—scheduled to have concluded the reunion Thursday—broke up in a row when Gen. Howell tried to exclude women auxiliary members whom he claimed were attempting to "dominate us old boys."

The fireworks began as soon as Gen. Howell rapped for order.

"This meeting," he announced, "is for the veterans alone. I cannot and will not have anyone else in the room. The ladies must go and let us conduct our own business."

There was a roar of protest from the assembled veterans, many of whom rose to their feet, waving canes, and demanding that their women attendants remain.

But Gen. Howell was adamant. He refused to continue the meeting unless the veterans were left alone—he also excluded several Sons of Confederate Veterans who had earlier concluded meetings and dropped in to watch the elections.

"You are a regular Hitler," came an angry voice from the floor. Gen. Howell left the rostrum, his fighting blood boiling. He strode among the delegates, raised his fist and shouted:

"You can't say that to your commander in chief! You have insulted the uniform I wear! You took orders in days gone by—and you are going to take them now! I'm still your commander and my orders will be carried out!"

Order was finally restored, but only after Gen. Howell and Gen. Homer Atkinson, of Richmond, almost came to blows. They were separated with difficulty by several of the younger veterans—those in their 80's.

Gen. Atkinson, a past commander in chief of the U. C. V., was later nominated to succeed Howell, but withdrew his name and stalked out of the meeting after a second flareup over the method of conducting ballots.

That left Gen. Howell, who had been nominated for reelection and Gen. R. P. Scott, 93, of Dallas, Tex., running for the post. Before the ballots had been counted, Gen. Scott—a trifle hard-of-hearing—believed he had been elected. He arose and started his acceptance speech:

"I knew I'd get it . . ." he started to say. But he was told the ballots had yet to be counted and sat down with an air of confidence, ready to begin all over again when the time came. The final count, however, showed Gen. Howell the winner by one vote.

It was unanimously decided—the proposal coming from Gen. Atkinson before he left the meeting—to continue the annual reunions until there were no more "Boys in Gray" to carry on.

Exhausted by the exciting session, most of the old soldiers left the meeting room on the arms of their wives and daughters who finally were admitted after the election results had been announced.

The parade yesterday was the highlight of the entire convention. The auto caravan of gray-clad veterans led modern marching units of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Bands played "Dixie," flags of the Confederacy waved and the few hundred spectaotrs who lined Constitution avenue cheered lustily as the "old boys" rode by.

Flanking Maj. Gen. R. S. Hudgins, of Richmond, grand marshal of the parade, were the two veterans who refused cars and insisted on horses—Maj. Gen. F. Thomas Evans, chief surgeon of the U. C. V., and Gen. J. R. Sadler, of Nashville, Tenn.

Tired, but happy in the thought that they had attended one more "glorious reunion," the old soldiers last night prepared to entrain

Association members voted to table an invitation to join the proposed North Washington Council of Citizens Associations in the area, on the grounds that coordination is already achieved by the federation.

They went on record against the proposed bill calling for a District contribution toward expenses of Gravelly Point Airport, constructed by the Federal Government. The association reiterated its plea for a recreation and community center at the old Emory estate, Georgia and Concord Avenues northwest.

Restoration of the testing station on Bryant Street was urged, members claiming that this step would save the District government some $15,000 annually.

Boy, 7, Injured, Schoolmaster Held in Assault

Skull Is Fractured; Maj. Millard Freed Under Bail of $1,500

Maj. Homer B. Millard, 42, principal of the Millard Preparatory School, was at liberty under $1,500 bail last night charged with assaulting a 7-year-old colored boy, Clark Busey, last Tuesday.

The child remained in the well only a few minutes before one of the students lowered a ladder to him, Maj. Millard declared. He said the child was sick afterward and that he heard the boy had eaten something that did not agree with him before he came to the school.

Charles was taken to the home of Nellie Reeves, 1265 Twenty-third Street Northwest, with whom he lived, by three delivery men for a downtown department store. He was then taken to Emergency Hospital where doctors treated him for a stomach disorder and released him.

When he returned home, his mother said, he became sick again and was taken to Children's Hospital where X-rays disclosed the skull fracture.

The warrant was applied for by Mrs. Elizabeth Busey, 1324 V Street Northwest, the boy's mother. The boy suffered a fractured skull.

Maj. Millard, whose school prepares for West Point, said Busey used abusive language when ordered off school property. The headmaster said he lowered the child into a window well 6 feet deep to punish him and that Charles landed on his feet.

Camp to Train 10,500 Planned At Ft. Belvoir

It Will Become Replacement Center For Third Corps Area

The Army announced yesterday that a training camp for 10,500 men called under the selective service program would be built at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Under the program disclosed, Belvoir will become the Third Corps Area "replacement center" for the men selected for service with the Army engineers. Cantonment type buildings will be constructed to house 7,500 white and 3,000 colored soldiers.

Similar "replacement centers" for other branches of the Army, at which men from the District, Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania will be trained, were also designated.

Aberdeen Quarters

Accommodations for 4,800 white and 1,000 colored soldiers will be established at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md. Men assigned to the ordnance will go there. A chemical warfare training camp housing 800 white and 200 colored troops will be established at Edgewood, Arsenal, Md., and quartermaster and medical camp is scheduled for Camp Lee, Va., near Petersburg.

Camp Lee will house 16,500 white and 3,000 colored troops in the projected centers. All of the camps, it was said, are to be ready for occupancy by March 15, 1941.

The War Department also announced that reception centers for men called into the Army from this area will be established at Camp Lee and New Cumberland Depot, Pa., to help relieve the pressure at Fort Meade, Md. One thousand-man cantonments will be built at both posts to house the men while they are being classified and inducted.

Under the Army's plans, the greater part of the men called for training will go directly from reception centers into Regular Army and National Guard units to round them out to full war strength. The new men will be taught the art of war by their commanding officers and more experienced men in the ranks.

Special Instruction

A number, however, will be assigned to the new "replacement centers," which will be somewhat similar to the World War training camps. Some will be given special instruction in the work of their particular branch, to fit them for the more technical posts, while others will receive basic training and will be transferred to troop units to replace men who are discharged.

Yesterday's announcement disclosed plans for constructing 19 replacement centers and 16 recruit reception centers. There are to be 21 of the former and perhaps as many as 50 of the latter. No indication was given as to the cost of the Belvoir camp and the other replacement centers, but it was stated that a typical 1,000-man reception center would cost $275,000.

The buildings to be constructed at the Virginia and Northern posts will be temporary structures similar to those put up during the World War. In the South, tent camps will be established.

Bride of 4 Days Says Husband Left Her Stranded Here

Police last night were searching for a 32-year-old Baptist minister, reported missing by his bride of less than a week, who said she is stranded here.

Mrs. Ruth Robinson, 26, told police she married the Rev. Roy C. Robinson, at their home, Milligan, Tenn., last Monday. They arrived in Washington on their honeymoon Wednesday, she said.

Thursday, Mrs. Robinson said, she went to a beauty parlor in the 800 block of Twelfth Street Northwest at 12:30 p. m. Her husband left her, saying he was going to a barber shop and agreed to meet her at 2:30 p. m. He did not return and has not been seen since, the woman said.

With only enough money to pay for her beauty treatment, Mrs. Robinson said she appealed to Elizabeth Seaton, beautician, who took her to her home, 102 E Street Northwest, for the night.

Yesterday, Mrs. Robinson spent all day at the beauty shop, but her husband did not appear. He had $230 in his possession, she said.

Working for Washington

Primary Interest of Takoma, D. C. Citizens Is to Limit Section to Individual Homes

Opposed Apartments Even to the Extent Of Going to Court

This is the thirteenth article in a series about citizens associations in the District, and their efforts to make the community a better place in which to live.

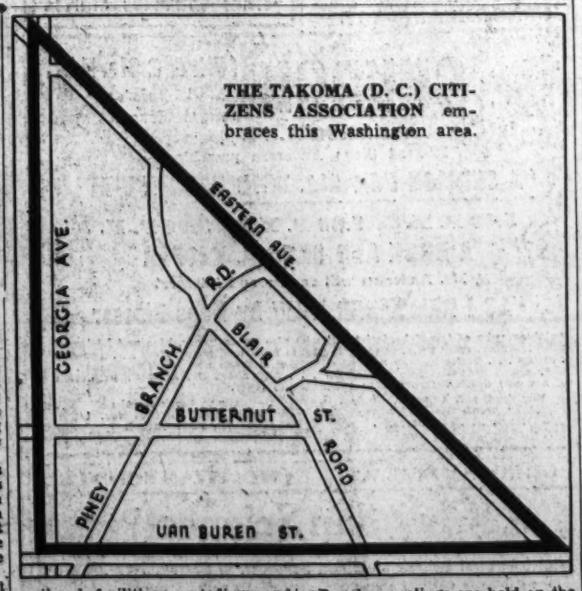
As with many areas in the District, Takoma, D. C., is served by more than one citizens organization. Younger of the two in that section is the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., formed in 1926 by members of the Takoma Park Citizens Association, which has members in both Maryland and the District.

Primary interest of the District unit is to keep Takoma a residential section of individual homes. It has opposed erection of apartment houses even to the extent of initiating court action. To date it has been successful, also in opposing licensing of liquor stores for the sale of hard liquor.

A monument to the association's efforts for the last several years is the new Calvin Coolidge High School, at Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest. It was built largely through the efforts of the unit, according to President Wallace C. Magathan.

Magathan, who has been president of the body for nine successive years, has followed the project from its beginning, appearing before the Board of Education, officials of the Bureau of the Budget, the District Commissioners, committees of Congress, the Architect of the District and the Fine Arts Commission.

High on the association's program for the coming year is the development of the Takoma Recreation Center. This tract is bounded by Third, Fifth, Van Buren and Sheridan Streets Northwest, and includes the new high school. Recreational facilities, a stadium and a children's playground there are planned by the citizens organization.



THE TAKOMA (D. C.) CITIZENS ASSOCIATION embraces this Washington area.

Cooperation with other associations in the neighborhood has resulted in greatly improved transportation facilities in Takoma, according to Secretary William M. Greene. Further improvement in the bus service also is on the agenda.

Two annual community events sponsored by the Citizens Association of Takoma are the Christmas tree celebration and the membership dinner, usually held in February.

Regular meetings are held on the first Monday of each month in the Takoma Elementary School, Piney Branch Road and Dahlia Street Northwest. Besides Magathan, the officers of the association include Bruce E. Anderson, first vice president; Lewis A. Jones, second vice president; Carl C. King, corresponding secretary, and William M. Greene, recording secretary.

Delegates from the Takoma unit to the Federation of Citizens Associations are Secretary Greene and F. J. DeMoll.

Youthful Missionaries to Wed Before Afghanistan Voyage

Robert Wyatt, Maude Prester Set December Date

By Robert Tate Allan

Undaunted by the war conditions abroad that threaten survival of any mission enterprises, two youthful members of Maryland Avenue Baptist Church, and graduates of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, expect to be married in December just before sailing for the Afghanistan mission field.

They are Robert Wyatt and Miss Maude Prester, both 20, of the Christian youth program of the congregation at Fourteenth and Maryland Avenue Northeast, which boasts of three other young people planning either home or foreign missionary careers.

Miss Elizabeth Golihew, 21, of 615 Florence Street Northwest, and Miss Mary Logamarsino, also students at Moody, are expecting to follow missionary work after graduation, it was pointed out yesterday, with the possibility that they may work in the foreign fields. Mary Larson, of Bowie, is studying at King's College, Belmar, New Jersey.

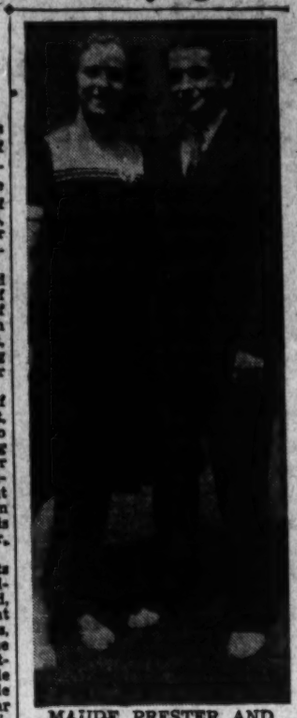
While the future Robert Wyatts will function under the Mid-Missions Board in the foreign field, they will have an independent status, the Rev. W. A. Emmans, pastor of the Maryland Avenue Church, indicated yesterday, hinting that several other young people of the congregation may decide on missionary careers in the near future. Miss Prester is now affiliated with the colportage department at Moody.

The three Baptist Young People's Unions of the church have been the soil from which the prospective missionaries and the present church leaders have sprouted. Elizabeth was active in the B. Y. P. U. and the choir; Mary Larsen is former Intermediate Union director, and David Logamarsino, brother of Mary and Moody graduate, was once senior union president. He will soon return to study at the Moody Seminary.

Ever interested in social service, the young people of the church have been conducting Sunday afternoon programs at Gallinger Hospital and street-corner meetings on Friday nights in the northeast.

The congregation was the spirit behind the founding of the Northeast Mision at 1340 H Street four years ago. The idea for the project developed from a meeting at the church, when one worshipper—not a member of the congregation—offered to pay one month's rental for a mission site. Metropolitan Baptist Church, Sixth and A Streets Northeast, led by Dr. John Compton Ball, and the Douglas Memorial Methodist Church, Eleventh and H Streets Northeast, then under Dr. Clarence Corkan, followed with spiritual and material cooperation.

Maryland Avenue Church, which has grown from 65 ot 425 members during the 12 years' pastorate of Mr. Emmans, is now engaged in a building renovation program, expected to cost about $6,000. It includes the excavation of ground for a basement for Sunday school classes, face-lifting of the east entrance of the church, and other details.



MAUDE PRESTER AND ROBERT WYATT

Among leaders of the congregation are Heron Todd, chairman of the board of trustees; E. B. Godbold, chairman of the board of deacons; H. A. Owens, Sunday school superintendent; Mrs. Heron Todd, president of the Woman's Missionary Society, and others.

Paterson (N. J.), native, the Rev. Mr. Emmans came to the northeast church—his first and only pastorate—following his graduation from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky., in 1938. He and Mrs. Emmans have two children—Robert, 10, and Mary Ellen, 6.

Christian Science

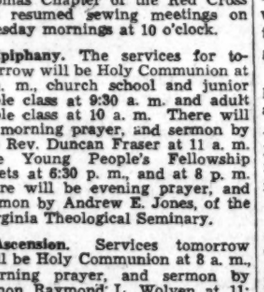
"PANGE LINGUA GLORIOSI"
Now, my tongue the mystery telling
Of the glorious Body sing
And the Blood, all price excelling
Which the Gentiles' Lord and King,
Once on earth amongst us dwelling
Shed for this world's ransoming.



Written by St. Thomas Aquinas for the office of Corpus Christi in 1263, this, the greatest of all Communion hymns, is modelled on the Pange Lingua of Fortunatus. The translation is based on the versions of Caswall and Neale.

Medical Preparedness

Health Education as Important As Arms to Nation's Defense

Fifth and last in a series of picture-stories showing the part medical science is playing in national defense.

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The increased activity at the National Institute of Health is typical of the Nation's mounting concern over the health of its civilian and military populations.

Advent of the national defense program has submerged, if not eliminated altogether, differences that existed previously as to the ways of going about making Americans a healthier people. Words are giving way before action.

As this is written, the American Public Health Association is in session at Detroit formulating policies designed to bring this country's physical efficiency to the top and keep it there. Simultaneously the Association of Military Surgeons is meeting across Lake Erie in Cleveland to act on its own peculiar medical and surgical problems.

Medical preparedness will be the theme of the thirtieth annual Clinical Congress of the American College of Surgeons to be held in Chicago October 21-25. Last month a special conference of the Nation's State health officers convened in Washington at the call of Surgeon General Thomas Parran and adopted a sweeping program. Scarcely had their meeting ended than President Roosevelt announced appointment of a health coordinating committee, headed by Dr. Irvin T. Abell, former president of the American Medical Association.

The Army, Navy, Public Health Service and State health departments have reached a joint agreement to enforce an eight-point venereal disease control plan in and around areas where troops and national defense employes are concentrated.

Under cooperative arrangements by Federal and State health authorities, every man registering on October 16 will either have an opportunity to take a free blood test for syphilis or receive a leaflet stressing the importance of this check on his physical fitness. It is estimated that there will be 300,000 cases of syphilis—much of it unknown and even unsuspected — among the 16,500,000 registrants.

(In the World War venereal disease was the third highest cause of disability, affecting 350,000 officers and men and causing the Army 6,500,000 days loss.)

Prevention of disease is the theme of the medical preparedness program. Educating the people, whether they wear uniforms or mufti, that they have it in their own power to eliminate smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid fever and, by exercising vigilance, venereal disease and nutritional deficiency, as sources of worry, is as much a part of the scheme as laboratory research to find causes, preventives and cures.

True, much remains to be learned or proved. How to prevent measles which, despite what one might think, is one of the Army's biggest bugbears? Ditto for mumps. Is there an immunizer against gas gangrene, deadly habitue of battlefields? Will the newly developed vaccines to prevent typhus, pneumonia and influenza work out satisfactorily? Serum and sulfapyridine are the answer to the urgent need of a specific treatment for pneumonia but what about influenza—and the common cold?

Public health experts will tell you, however, that this country's death and illness rates would take a sharp drop if we would only take advantage of present knowledge, and, in the cases of those who cannot afford to act on their dictates, if means were provided for them to receive the vitamins and the vaccinations and the serums which their bodies need.

"Results of recent investigations of vitamin B1 deficiency suggest that efficiency for prosecution of a war can be increased by the simple expedient of providing a very little more of viamin B1 than the public is receiving," says an editorial in a recent issue of the American Medical Association's Journal.

"England, locked in the struggle of total war and conscious of the importance of maintaining at high levels the strength and courage of its people, has fortified margarine with vitamin A and restored calcium and thiamin hydrochloride (vitamin B1) to flour."

All indications today are that the national defense program, by demonstrating the need for health as well as armed preparedness, will prove a blessing in disguise.

1. THE EDUCATION CAMPAIGN of the Public Health Service is not lagging behind its achievements in field and laboratory. Here Charles Fellnagel, artist, is shown at work on an exhibit whose purpose is to encourage people to take advantage of knowledge gained on the control of venereal disease

2. AMONG THE FAR-FLUNG DUTIES of the Public Health Service is preventing the entry into the United States of yellow fever and malaria mosquitoes. In this photo, a P. H. S. inspector sprays a plane that has just arrived in Miami, Fla., from South America. The spray was developed by the Federal health agency

3. EVEN THE COUNTRY GROCER is being put to work in the Government's educational crusade against venereal disease. This one is stuffing into the food bag a printed invitation, furnished by health authorities, to his customer to come down to the village clinic and get a blood test.

ARTHUR RAUM CONSULTS TEACHER ELEANOR CORBIN ABOUT HIS SON WALTER'S WORK

Parents went to school with their children this week at Whittier School but didn't have to answer the teachers' questions. The children did that, glibly, with a lack of self-consciousness in spite of the 100 pairs of parental eyes upon them.

Parents, content to sit quietly on the sidelines, were ranged in a hollow square in Whittier's auditorium Thursday night. In the center, a group of first grade children gathered around their teacher, Mrs. H. S. Beall who conducted a typical class for the edification of the fathers and mothers.

"Here comes the mail man. He has a letter for us . . ." a little boy was reading. As he and the other children read, they slid little green pieces of cardboard down the page, uncovering one line at a time.

If any parent thought, "What new-fangled thing is that?" the answer was soon forthcoming. Miss Elsie Green, principal, explained that "the markers help to keep the eyes steady," when a small child is reading.

In reading, the child shouldn't point his finger at words separately—"that makes him too word-conscious," Miss Green explained. "When he uses a marker, his eyes swing along a whole line and he develops an eye span."

Next a group of third grade children, with Mrs. H. D. Marmaduke, teacher, read and talked about Christopher Columbus. Stepping up the demonstration of progress in reading, Mrs. Kathleen P. Deane grouped her sixth grade pupils around a table and let them conduct the class—with only intermittent comments from her on the sidelines.

"I learned a lot," a parent said as the meeting ended. The parental conference on elementary education was held at night for the first time at this school, so fathers too could attend and see what goes on in their children's classrooms. The school is at Fifth and Sheridan Streets northwest.

'Knute Rockne' and Whizbang Revue Pack the Earle With Howling Mob

Pat O'Brien Stars In Film Biography Of Great Coach; Stage Bill a Riot

Greeted by a crowd of such proportions and eagerness to gain entrance to the theater that police and firemen had to be called to prevent the doors being unhinged and the boxoffice torn from its anchorage, one of the most entertaining bills of this or any other season opened yesterday at the Earle. The major screen attraction is the Warner Bros.' production of "Knute Rockne — All-American," supplemented by the admirable Technicolor short subject, "Service to the Colors," and augmented by a stage revue that moves with the speed of the wind, as Jim Barton would say.

BELL

There could be a double meaning to the "All-American" portion of the screen feature's title. It might refer to Knute Rockne's standing in the football world or to the completeness with which he absorbed the fundamentals of true Americanism, beginning at the age of 7, when his parents brought him to the United States in 1892. The film biography, so adroitly fashioned by Robert Buckner, covers both aspects of a notable career and balances them with fine dramatic effectiveness.

The story has its inception in the little town of Voss, Norway, where Lars Rockne, builder of fine carriages, has completed his masterpiece and decides to exhibit it at the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago. Moving their family to the country in which their children may find their greatest opportunities, it is a bit of a shock to the parents when their small son, Knute, returns home late to dinner one fall evening with a broken nose, but elated that he has been named end on the sandlot team. As for the pummeled proboscis, "Well, I guess that is part of the game." Rockne's interest in football never faltered from that day.

Gridiron fans will find much to their liking when, after six years of grueling service as a mail clerk in the Chicago postoffice, Rockne enters Notre Dame at an advanced age for such scholastic undertakings and is assigned to room with Gus Dorais. Declining a summertime post as assistant to Father Nieuwland, Notre Dame's famous scientist, Rocvkne joins Dorais as a beach lifeguard and together they evolve the new plays, including the forward pass, that later were to be the undoing of Army in one of football's greatest upsets. Graduating from player to coach, "Rock" develops the almost legendary George Gipp, greatest pigskin star ever turned out at South Bend, the "Four Horsemen" and an unbeatable team that sweeps the country to an unbroken chain of victories. He even discovers his famous backfield shift in a chorus girls' routine when he takes "his boys" to a musical show as a bit of relaxation after a long season's grind. His whole career on the field is there. But there is also something for those to whom the intricacies of football are vague. They will find interest in Rockne's contributions to character building, his romance with Bonnie Skiles, the fine spirit of camaraderie in their modest home, his gentleness to little children and his defense of the game he made great before a committee of educators bent on abolishing collegiate football. Here, indeed, was a man.

In the title role of the picture, Pat O'Brien brings to the screen far and away the finest characterization he has ever executed before the cameras. The close-clipped speech and speedy delivery are gone. So are all of the O'Brien mannerisms O'Brien becomes surprisingly Rockne. There should be a tremendous rise in his stock as an actor. Gale Page, as Bonnie, his wife, contributes a comparably true portrait of an understanding, patient and devoted helpmeet. As George Gipp and Gus Dorais, Ronald Reagan and Owen Davis, jr., have something of the real football player about them and Donald Crisp and Albert Basserman fortify the excellent cast as Father Callahan and Father Nieuwland, respectively, of Notre Dame.

The stage revue is a zippy item, starring those prodigious swing artistes, the Andrews Sisters, whose songs were thunderously approved by yesterday's first audience, and featuring Gene Sheldon and his feminine assistant, in their familiar and always ridiculous banjo and clowning act. The Hollywood Co-eds, two better than usual acro-tap dancers, and the Roxyettes make up the rest of the stage bill.

Eileen Ritter's "Sing-a-Song-with-Mike," the newsreel and that "Service to the Colors," a lesson in patriotism to all who will be called to active duty in defense of the Nation, complete the ne plus ultra bill.

Bonnie Roots the Boys Across!

GALE PAGE

Hillbilly Culture Takes Lickin' In New Film at Metropolitan

By Richard L. Coe

"COMIN' ROUND THE MOUNTAIN." Paramount picturization of a screen play by Lewis R. Foster, Maxwell Shane and Duke Atteberry, based on a story by Foster, with Bob Burns, Una Merkel, Jerry Colonna, Don Wilson, Pat Barrett, Harold Peary, Bill Thompson, Olin Howland, Brenda Fowler, Richard Carle, Lona Roberts, Zeffie Tilbury, Cliff Arquette, William Demarest, Mirandy and Walter Catlett. Directed by George Archainbaud. Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Metropolitan Theater.

That hybrid refinement known as hillbilly culture is immortalized for a little while on celluloid in the Metropolitan's new film, "Comin' Round the Mountain," with such prophets of the cult as Bob Burns, Jerry Colonna, Uncle Ezra, and Mayor Gildersleeve. The result is as corny as it sounds.

While the strains of a hillybilly band have long been enough to set any average moron checking up on sanitarium rates, there has always been wry amusement in such cartoons as Esquire is wont to publish mocking our mountain citizens and their quaint habits. In still life our cartoonists have given them a humor worthy of much-quoted after-dark wits.

Such a cartoon comes to life exactly once in "Comin' Round the Mountain," when these feudin' folk are described as living "so far back in the mountains that they ain't seen Mrs. Roosevelt yet." Which isn't exactly a wow but it sounds pretty good in "Comin' Round the Mountain."

Difficulty with "Comin Round the Mountain" is that its hillbilly humor has appeared before and to far better effect with Burns, Martha Raye and the Ritz Brothers in the pivotal parts.

Radio Favorites Cast

Dial twisters will find many familiar voices in "Comin' Round the Mountain" even if the faces are strange (an' how). There's the Yehoodie fellow from Bob Hope's program, Jerry Colonna, as one Argyle Phifft, who is on for an unfortunately brief time, being a balloonist who had promised to marry Una Merkel four years before. His apoplectic visage achieves a restful distinction after the untutored camera behavior of such radio folk as Uncle Ezra (Pat Barrett), Mayor Gildersleeve (Harold Peary), Barney Smoot (Bill Thompson), Cliff Arquette and Mirandy.

The story details how Bob Burns has become a Person of Importance in some town, has gone back to Tennessee with a radio-minded friend and treated his family to soft city ways. This blighted human gets the notion that the family music would make smacking good entertainment, whereat they slip off to Monotony (the name of a village) and embark on Uncle Ezra's Station W-A-R-T.

Mixed into all this are the picturesque costumes of the unspoiled mountain folk, an unctuous politician who forces Burns to run for Mayor of Monotony (he wins), and an all-in-all perfect libel case for Tennessee.

There is an obvious attempt to tell the story by the flashback method employed to such fine advantage in the same company's "The Great McGinty." This time the story is angled from the crooked mayor's viewpoint and a measure of suspense is obtained by making the mayor's character uncertain at first glimpse. But the novelty wears off quickly.

Short subjects at the Metropolitan find Cliff "Ukulele Ike" Edwards, fighting for his life against a mad doctor, in "Just a Cute Kid," and that unequalled high priest of the glow burn, Edgar Kennedy, in "A Trailer Tragedy," in which he endures further injustices from that unspeakable father-in-law of his. The newsreel brings shots of the increasing defense preparations and includes the latest clips from Europe.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Oct. 11.

A BRITISH NAVAL officer, who just arrived here to help take the Queen Elizabeth to a Canadian port, was a member of the crew of the Lancastria, which was sunk during the evacuation of Dunkerque. He relates this story of Nazi plane whose bomb landed amidships. The crew, thrown into the sea, began to swim towards the British destroyer standing by. But the Nazi plane returned, swooping to machine-gun the survivors. Machine-gun bullets splattered through the water—until the destroyer's antiaircraft gun downed the plane. The Nazi aviator bailed out, his parachute opened, and he descended slowly, landing among the swimmers he had tried to destroy . . . Slowly, calmly, a British officer aboard the destroyer aimed his gun at that aviator —and fired.

WILLIAM C. BULLITT and Dorothy Thompson were passengers in a plane bound for Washington last week. "I keep telling them in Washington that we're not stepping-up production fast enough," said Miss Thompson, "and that we should now be producing planes and tanks on a wartime basis. But they tell me I'm crazy" . . . "That's odd," Bullitt told her. "They tell me I'm crazy for saying the same thing. And they told Edgar Mowrer, the foreign correspondent, that he's also crazy for saying that . . . "What do you think we should do?" asked Miss Thompson . . . "Let's organize," suggested Bullitt, "as 'Lunatics, Inc.,' and then wait 12 months to see who's right."

THE OFFER of Newfoundland, the Bahamas and Jamaica to the U. S. The President never has desired to annex these territories, but only to use them as naval bases . . . The President first thought of obtaining bases there two years ago when, on what was ostensibly a vacation cruise, he went to Campobello Island, where he conferred with Canada's Defense Minister, and then to the Caribbean. Annexation of these islands, in settlement of war debts, would add to our economic burdens—for these islands are impoverished, and their economic life would require subsidy . . . And so for two years the President pondered over obtaining the naval bases without taking title—until the 50-destroyers-deal accomplished it directly, and most inexpensively.

"The Return of Frank James" Is to the Columbia This Week

Heading into another week downtown is that hard-bitten, rough-riding saga, "The Return of Frank James." When Frank came out of retreat, everyone knew it—especially his enemies.

Even considered in relation to its predecessor, "Jesse James," the greatest adventure (and box-office) picture produced for years, the new James' picture stacks up well. There's plenty of gunpowder in the plot, the cast is enriched not only by Henry Fonda ,who practically stole the original James boys' opus from Tyrone Power, but by the inimitable Donald Meek and Henry Hull, who is again the 'tarnation-and-hellfire old editor. Also there's a courtroom scene that tops all courtroom scenes except that humdinger in "My Favorite Wife."

Frank James (Fonda) is holed up on a hill farm when he gets news that the Fords have been acquitted of Jesse's murder. Burned up by the news, he takes an extra chew of tobacco and lights out after the low-lived Fords. Money must be had, so he holds up the railroad office, figuring very morally that railroad money had been used to kill Jesse and railroad money will be used to avenge the homicide. In the course of this semi-ethical holdup, the watchman is killed, not by Frank but by one of the enthustic posse. In fact, Frank is cinematically innocent of homicide at every point. He's always charging around with a six-gun, but his targets fall off cliffs or are actually shot by some one else.

Though the Frank James role is an easy chore for Fonda, he's taken pains to differentiate it from his part in the first picture. It's an older, colder, more seasoned Frank James who goes out to avenge Jesse's murder than the humorous, young hellion who rescued Jesse from jail under the sheriff's nose.

Jackie Cooper makes his debut as a movie outlaw, a harebrained kid who tags after Frank, despite being forbidden and winds up full of lead. Young Cooper does pretty well on the whole, though his death scene is a bit on the corny side. George Barbier, who's been knocking about in none too grateful character roles, comes into his own as the puffy old Confederate judge.

The love interest in the picture is slight, just a little girl reporter with moony notions about Frank, who admires her in an absent-minded fashion. That's all to the good.

There'll be other James boys' pictures—but not for seasons, until the motion picture people, casting around for ideas, notice those 1930-40 boxoffice records, decide on a remake. In the meantime, don't miss saying goodbye to Frank in this one.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Oct. 11 (INS).—"Mrs. Miniver," by Jan Struther, easily the current best seller, was sold today to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for a sum whispered as tops paid for a novel. Don't say I said, so but I understand $50,000 is the price Mrs. Struther received. The story is that of an English family living in the present days and it's so perfect for Greer Garson that it is not in the least surprising that she will be starred in this popular story as soon as she finishes "Blossoms in the Dust."

PARSONS

Just so the English atmosphere will be correct and the novel made into a worthy screen play, James Hilton and R. C. Sheriff, well-known British authors, have been engaged to write the adaptation.

The two lads who wrote "They Drive by Night"—Meyer Levin and A. J. Bezzerides—are doing all right for themselves, I'd say. Today they sold "Power House" to Paramount for $10,000 after three studios tried to buy it. Just as interesting as the success of the two writers is the pleasing word that Brian Donlevy, who became one of the most talked of actors of the year in "The Great McGinty," will have the starring role with Dorothy Lamour, no less, as the heroine. Isn't that a combination—Dorothy and Donlevy? Pretty good, for my money. The story is a rugged, robust yarn in which a high tension power line figures.

Myrna Loy and Bill Powell may be without their third musketeer when the new "Shadow of the Thin Man" gets under way November 1. W. S. Van Dyke, who has megaphoned all the popular "Thin Man" mystery comedies, is under mobilization orders and may be called to join his battalion around the time the picture is ready to start, for Woody is a major in the reserves. It won't seem like a "Thin Man" picture to Myrna and Bill without Woody.

Virginia Wertheimer checked in at the Cedars of Lebanon for a minor operation; James Roosevelt and Lloyd Bacon lunching tete-a-tete and talking over "Pot-o'-Gold." I was lunching with attractive Brenda Joyce and introduced her to Jimmie, Lloyd and Morton Downey; the mysterious redhead with Bob Preston is Kay Feltus with her hair dyed; the Weissmullers are in town—baby and all—and is Johnny proud? Florence Lawrence, drama editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, has issued invitations to a breakfast honoring Edward Everett Horton a week from Sunday. In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Oct. 11.

Lillian Day, who sold her story, "The Youngest Profession," to Metro for $20,000, has been at the Metro Studio two weeks now, and not half a dozen people know she's in town. The story was gobbled up by Louis Mayer after he'd heard only half the synopsis. He yelled, "Grab it!" He was just in the nick of time. Universal wanted it for Durbin, Paramount for Betty Field. Lillian's one of those quiet gals who's never met one of the stars she wrote about. Has been watching them eat in the commissary—and didn't say so, but I still don't think she wants to know 'em. This is her first visit to Hollywood. She signed for one picture—doesn't believe a writer should spend more than six months here, because that precludes contact with human beings. She likes to mingle with her own kind. Boy, is that telling us!

HOPPER

When she wrote the story, she was broke. Had heard so much about the oldest profession—wanted to know about the youngest. After writing first episode, she had to do another before a magazine would accept it. (She got $125 apiece for them). Says she: "I know the point of view of the fan now, because I've read some of the kids' diaries. They still think breakfast in bed is decadent. When the stars came to New York, I used to get their schedules from their press agents. Nearly broke my neck getting Basil Rathbone's—then he up and changed it."

"Too Many Girls" is so filled with vim, vigor, and vitality that if you weren't kept constantly laughing at the antics of Eddie Bracken (and just watch that boy's smoke!), you'd feel your own arteries hardening. It's got the hottest conga this side of the jungle. Haven't heard such drums since "Emperor Jones." LeRoy Prinz really outdid himself. Lucille Ball gets better and better. Whoever wrote "Latins Are Lousy Lovers" should take a look at Desi Arnaz in action. Dick Carlson played one of the sappiest paris ever handed a juvenile. Only his sincerity saved it from being utterly ridiculous. There's no sense to the story, but it's one of the most entertaining pictures I've seen.

Metro won't know until Spence Tracy returns from his vacation, whether he'll do the doctor story first, or the sequel to "Boys' Town," called "Men of Boys' Town," which will also star Mickey Rooney. Johnny Considine is busy whipping up an original musical with a Hollywood background for Kathryn Grayson, of the beautiful voice, and Frank Morgan . . . To shoot backgrounds for "Down Argentine Way," Producer Ralph Dietrich was sent to South America, where he shot 30,000 feet of film. Only 250 were used—but they were stunning . . . Eddie Albert is the absent-minded professor of the movies. At lunch the other day he was reading Roth's Memory Course. He walked out of the commissary, left the book on the table, forgot to pay his check.

Burgess Meredith will stay in Hollywood to free-lance at least a year before going back to the stage. In the meantime, he moves out of Jimmy Stewart's house and in with Franchot Tone . . . Did you ever hear of a stowaway having four cars waiting at the landing? Well, Ruth Selwyn did. Included in the number was a station wagon for her luggage. She walked off the boat with a paper parcel in her hand, because all the luggage had been left behind in Honolulu.

G. U. Stops Waynesburg After Real Fight, 26-12

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

The face of Head Coach Ray Flaherty was eloquent with disgust as he followed his Redskin team into the dressing room at the end of a spiritless two-hour workout. The Redhead was in a nail-eating mood, in fact.

POVICH

"I don't know where their minds were this morning, but they weren't thinking of beating the Cardinals," rasped the Redskins' coach. "We couldn't have licked a high school team out there today. They don't know it, but I do. Right now this club is right in the mood to blow one."

Speaking of moods, it was Flaherty in a typical one. Anything less than a frenzy of enthusiasm by his ball players leaves the Redkin coach sickened. If he is hepped on any subject, it is this one of team spirit. He isn't attempting any bear stories when he publicly bemoans the lack of fire in practice. He sets more store by whooping interest than any other item.

"I can call what is going to happen to us in any game before we leave the dressing room," Flaherty has said. "I can tell by the way they are acting whether they're fired up to a game or whether they're going to give me less than a 100 per cent performance. I've seen days when I couldn't get 'em interested in a ball game. They have more moods than temperamental women, honest. Keeping a club on a fine mental edge is the really tough part of a coach's job."

Flaherty's success with the Redskins stems not only from his material and his own clever coaching, but from the pregame psychology at which the Redhead is a master. The late Knute Rockne had that faculty of whipping his Notre Dame teams up to a game. Rockne's pregame orations—sometimes his silence—had the desired effect. He could berate, cajole or flatter as the individual case commanded.

So can Flaherty. We've seen him whip a laggard into fury with a verbal lashing that might have fetched another coach a punch in the nose. We've seen him play on his players' personal pride to get the same effect that on another day he would gain by threats. We've heard him, on occasion, tell his squad of pros bluntly that they're getting good wages for only 60 minutes of football a week and, dammit, to give him that 60 minutes this afternoon.

On one occasion a couple of years ago when the Redhead wasn't convinced that his athletes had their mind on the day's game, he invented a new move. He made every last one of 'em lie on their backs in front of their lockers and say nothing to each other. They could do little but look at the ceiling, and ceiling-gazing, Flaherty deduced, would make them aught but reflective. He was never more correct. That day the Redskins tore the opposition apart to win their ball game.

There is reason for Flaherty's worry over tomorrow's game with the Cardinals. He was in the grandstand late last month when the Cardinals slapped down no less than the powerful Chicago Bears by a 21-7 score. Flaherty saw the Cardinal team outplay the Bears at every turn and that night he saw nothing to comfort him what with his Redskins due to meet the Cardinals.

The Redhead knows also that Jimmy Conselman, who succeeded Ernie Nevers as coach of the Chicago team, is no green-pea adventurer in pro football despite the fact that his last berth was with Washington University at St. Louis. Conzelman was with the old Providence Steam Rollers when they won two pro league football titles and Flaherty was in the same league with him.

If the Redskins' coach is slightly hepped on the subject of fiery spirit, which he is, it may be perfectly pardonable. As an all-league end for a succession of years, he was the embodiment of rugged enthusiasm, almost maniacal in his slashing play. He isn't asking his Redskins to do anything he never used to do himself, and, in fact, he still has a yearning to hold down a job at end when the opening whistle blows.

Not the least of Flaherty's worries as the Cardinal invasion nears is the Chicago club's backfield team of Clark and McCullough. The Redhead wishes he could comfort himself with the thought that they are to old vaudeville comedians, but they happen to be a pair of slashing backs from Oklahoma University who do everything for the Cardinals except collect the guarantee.

Despite his penchant for pregame worry, though, Flaherty can take a rational view of his Redskins. He isn't exactly pleased with the defense play of his line, but that he isn't particularly alarmed.

"One reason they've been gaining through our line is because we've had our line rushing the heck out of their passers and breaking through. When you rush passers you're sacrificing something else in your line, but that is to be expected. Down near the goal, where it counts, I think the Redskin line is pretty good." That was vouchsafed by Assistant Coach Turk Edwards, which means that Flaherty thinks his line is not just pretty good but hot stuff.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, Oct. 11.—What's that sound, brother . . . that whoomping sound? Some 210-pound history scholar kicking a pigskin, eh? What's this, a yellow jaundice epidemic? . . . Ah, no, I see now, it's acres of 'mums pinned on the coats of pretty girls. And that angry snorting, in this land of peace? So that emits from 1,000,000 man-eating old grads who want their coach's scalp, huh? What's that whirring noise? Walter Camp turning over in his mausoleum at the 281,463 imitations of his All-America. What's that rustle . . . Skirts? Hmm, paying off the quarterback, eh? What's that flat-wheel noise? . . . Oh, sure, the railroads have gotten their football special trains out of the Smithsonian Institute again . . . With the long rickety bar in the baggage car. Do they get the garrulous old grads from the Smithsonian people, too? They must, for only a museum could house them with their feathers, pennants and croaky, half-remembered songs sounding above the rattling of the steam cars.

CONSIDINE

Baseball is gone, and this is our lot for a while. Maybe this is the last football season . . . Such as we have come to know football seasons.

Maybe next year all the good ones will be in soldier camps, for the college boys aren't exempt after next summer. Maybe the game will be taken away from the coaches and given back to the mild, young scholars who for physical or other reasons won't be drafted. That should be jolly, watching Buford Twillingham, 108-pound honor student in the Keats appreciation class, battering over from the 1-inch line. If you're left to watch.

But if football is going to skid, it promises to go down swinging. This season, just beginning to roll, has all the earmarks of a great one. The great names of 1939 . . . Harmon, Kmbrough, DeCorrevont, Christman, Scott, Crain, Robinson, McCullough, continue to sparkle. There will be a new deal in the toughest conference of them all, the Southwestern. There always is. Michigan is once again feared from coast to coast and will find Eastern Harvard just as simple as it found California week before last. Ohio State plays like the Redskins, and maybe they are. The scheduling becomes more national in scope. Tomorrow alone sees Notre Dame play Georgia Tech, Illinois meet Southern California, Indiana play Nebraska, Michigan come to Cambridge, North Carolina play Texas Christian, Pittsburgh meets Southern Methodist, Tulane meets Fordham and U. S. L. A. tackles Texas A. and M., which stands for assault and mayhem.

If this is the last big football year, for years, then it hit the peak for overemphasis in its publicity departments. You wouldn't believe your eyes, reading some of the stuff that comes off the typewriters of publicists at schools so erudite that a carelessly uttered "ain't" would cause the dean of men to swoon in his mortar board. The drum-beaters pictured their undergrads as all manner of despicable animal life, spoke of them with the detached zeal of an old slave mart spieler. One savant already has revolted. He quit Temple with the severe charge that school had spent $50,000 building up its football club—a declaration that coincided with the team's defeat at the hands of Georgetown. Georgetown won by two touchdowns, which might suggest an investment of $150,000 in its own team. But anyone who knows the story around Georgetown knows that this most underestimated club in the country (it hasn't lost a game since the 1937 season) is the result of good coaching of amateurs by Jack Hagerty.

Phils' Rookie Outfielder Is Married

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 11 (AP).—Danny Litwhiler, young Phillies outfielder who proved a sensation toward the close of the season, was married to Miss Dorothy Lynch last night at St. Aidan's Church. Both are from Ringtown, Pa.

After being farmed to Wilkes-Barre, Litwhiler was recalled for the last few weeks and batted .345, with five home runs among his hits.

This unusually good action picture shows Reserve Halfback Jack Spencer (9), of Georgetown, scoring the Hoyas' third touchdown last night in fourth period of game with Waynesburg at Griffith Stadium. Spencer, in grip of Walkowicz, Waynesburg tackle, barely got over, stumbling the last few yards and pitching forward just as he crossed the goal line. Joe Mickey (5), Georgetown guard, blocks out Peter LeDonne, Yellow Jackets' defensive halfback.

By Jack Munhall.

An underrated Waynesburg eleven, so obscure that on the official scoreboard it had been listed as "Waynesboro," played Georgetown on nearly even terms for three periods last night at Griffith Stadium, and gave the undefeated Hoyas one of their toughest battles in three years before finally yielding, 26-12.

An estimated crowd of 5,000 fans rubbed their eyes in amazement as the inspired Wolfpack from a little school of 400 students, located near Pittsburgh, asked for and gave no quarter to their much heavier foes and made it an interesting battle down to the final whistle.

Early in the third period Georgetown, which had been expected to roll up any score it pleased, was clinging to a precarious one-point lead at 13-12, but that was the closest the Wolves of Waynesburg got to spring what would have been the upset of the year.

At the end Georgetown had extended its great record to 19 games without defeat. One Georgetown streak, however, was smashed in the first period when Waynesburg, on a beautifully executed 34-yard forward pass, scored the first points the Hoyas had given up in seven games—or since the Syracuse game midway last season.

Long Pass Ties Score

That touchdown aerial, thrown from Bernie Mazer to Paul Brooks, who picked up five-men tandem interference on the Georgetown 20 and scored easily as Guard George blocked out the Hoyas' defensive halfback, Jules Koshlap, tied the score at 6-6.

Georgetown had scored first, reserve Fullback Frank McLaughlin crashing over tackle from the 8 on a spread formation, to culminate a drive of 20 yards. A 33-yard punt return by Halfback Lou Gheças, who later was hurt and used only sparingly, paved the way for the Georgetown score. Gheças was one of three Georgetown regulars injured, Fullback Jim Castiglia was removed to Georgetown Hospital in the second period with a possible chipped hip, and Augie Lio sustained a wrenched leg. Gheças may have a cracked rib, it was announced, and Castiglia was believed lost for the game with V. P. I. next Friday night.

With the score deadlocked at 6-6 at the start of the second period, Georgetown was established in a 13-6 lead when Jack Doolan, sophomore speedster, gathered in a 30-yard pass from Reserve Fullback John Barrett, after outrunning the Waynesburg secondaries.

The Yellow Jackets then held the Hoyas for the remainder of the first half and came back in the third period to pick up their second and final touchdown and throw a real scare into the Georgetown rooters. It was no luck-tainted touchdown that the Wolfpack scored, for they marched 84 yards with Mazer and Brooks, their brilliant little backs, gaining steadily on reverses until the drive reached the 21. From there Tom Crawford, a third exceptionally fast Wolfpack back, broke off right tackle, bounced in and out of the hands of G. U. Quarterback Joe McFadden and Koshlap and scored standing.

Hoyas Score Twice

That was Waynesburg's last threat and Georgetown, gathering momentum as the game progressed, rushed over a pair of scores in the fourth period. The first came when reserve Halfback Jack Spencer

Mrs. Meckley Bows in Golf Tournament

Mrs. Sloman Wins, 3 and 2, in M. A. Play at Chevy Chase

Mrs. Jerome Sloman, a three-time Baltimore City champion, won five of the first six holes against Mrs. Betty Meckley in the Middle Atlantic finals yesterday at Chevy Chase and the title on the sixteenth hole, 3 and 2.

The match was almost a foregone conclusion before the early morning gallery caught up with the players on the first nine. Mrs. Meckley rallied to cut the margin to 2 on the twelfth green but that was the last hole she won.

Thus Mrs. Sloman, who has never been able to win more than the Baltimore title on her home town courses, captured her second major sectional title over a local layout. In 1938 she won the Maryland State title from Mrs. Leo Walper in a match that ran just the opposite of today's play.

1941 Tourney Set

Mrs. Meckley is no stranger to Middle Atlantic finals. In 1935 and 1937 she won the title while on two other occasions, in addition to yesterday's match, she was runner-up.

Middle Atlantic P. G. A. President Jesse Dowling, of Hillendale, announced at the presentation that next year Middle Atlantic Women's championship was slated for the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club, one of the finest layouts in this area. He also announced a women's tournament would be held in conjunction with the M. A. Amateur championship at Hot Springs, Va.

At the end of five holes Mrs. Meckley was 5 down. They halved the second but Mrs. Sloman won the others, two when the Kenwood player three-putted. Mrs. Sloman capped her winning start by sinking a 65-foot putt on the sixth hole for a 4, a birdie by women's par.

Mrs. Meckley cut into the margin for the first time by winning the eighth with a well-played par. She disappointed her rooters by missing chances to win the ninth and tenth holes, halving both par 3's and bogey 4's.

Mrs. Meckley won the eleventh with a good 4 on the difficult hole and cut the margin to 2 up on the twelfth when Mrs. Sloman had trap trouble. The rally ended at this point, however.

Mrs. Sloman hit a fine tee shot on the thirteenth and they halved it in 3's, halved the fourteenth in 5's.

Ohio State Slight Choice Over Northwestern In Other Game; S. M. U. Tackles Pitt in Intersectional Clash

By Jack Cuddy.

United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 11.—That grand intersectional brawl—Notre Dame-Georgia Tech—headlines this week's national football program.

But purely sectional competition, like Northwestern vs. Ohio State, competes for attention.

In the general betting Notre Dame is favored to beat Georgia Tech, because of its apparently superior reserves. But Tech, surprise team of '39 and Orange Bowl victor, has plenty of backing. Particularly because Tech of this season is considered much more effective than the Tech of 1939, which held Notre Dame to a 17-14 victory.

The other big game tomorrow is that Big Ten-classic, Ohio State vs. Northwestern. Ohio State, conference champion, which protected its ambitions for a repeat last week by a winning tally in the last 19 seconds against Purdue, is favored slightly to beat Northwestern, but Northwestern started its season in amazing fashion by crushing Syracuse, 40-0.

Those two contests are tops in intersectional and regional competition. But they are challenged for attention by many games in the intersectional and conference bracket.

In the intersectional bracket we find Southern Methodist tangling with Pittsburgh for an important

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 11.—Before the largest crowd ever to see a football game at West Point, heavily favored Cornell will take the field against Army tomorrow afternoon. The attendance should be in the neighborhood of 30,000, with newly built stands helping to bring the total beyond the 27,000 who saw Harvard play Army five years ago.

Cornell will start a veteran team, the only change from its regular line-up being the substitution of experienced Jim Schmuck for injured Kirk Hershey at left end.

South Carolina Bows To Duquesne; Sub Back Thrills Crowd

By the United Press

Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Oct. 11.—Duquesne University came from behind tonight to defeat the South Carolina University Gamecocks, 27-21, but only after a substitute South Carolina back put the 18,000 Duquesne fans on tenterhooks in the closing ments by running an intercepted pass from behind his own goal line to the Duquesne 32-yard line.

Duquesne drew first blood in the wide-open game. Donelli cut outside right tackle from the 33-yard line for the first score, but an undaunted South Carolina team came right back. On the first play after the Duquesne kickoff, Grygo passed to Urban from his own 24 to his 35 and Urban ran for a touchdown.

In the opening action of the second quarter, Urban intercepted Chaldonic's pass on the South Carolina 13 and carried it to the Duquesne 5. Grygo passed to Urban for the score.

Florida Bows To Villanova Before 23,000

'Gators Stage a Game Battle but Lose to Superior Team, 28-0

By the United Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—Villanova College capitalized on University of Florida miscues to roll over the 'Gators, 28 to 0, before 23,000 football fans at Shibe Park tonight.

Florida, game but outclassed, matched Villanova up front with a great line but was unable to show much offensively. Villanova pierced the weak 'Gator secondary with an aerial attack that the Southerners were unable to stop.

Villanova scored one touchdown in the first period, marching from midfield to the Florida two. Twice Florida held, but Rosato finally crashed over, with Nick Basca adding the point. The Florida line stalled two Villanova scoring threats in the second, once on the 1-yard line and again on the four. However, a weak 'Gator punt gave Villanova the ball on the 44 and in nine plays the Wildcats scored on a pass from Basca to Pritko, Basca again converting.

Florida threatened in the scoreless third period, but lost the ball on

By Bill Burnett

Apparently convinced of their own prowess by early-season "rave notices," Western High gridmen opened defense of their 1939 interhigh championship yesterday with a 33-7 victory over Roosevelt.

There was nothing lucky about the winners' score. If anyone was favored by Dame Fortune it was Roosevelt, which finally rang the bell on a 48-yard pass in the third period after numerous more orthodox scoring chances had been throttled by the Red Raiders.

Approximately 2,500 noisy fans were on hand at Roosevelt Stadium to see the Raiders, held scoreless in the first quarter, tally once in the second and twice in the third and fourth periods. Two touchdowns resulted from passes of 20 and 16 yards and the other three on straight power plays.

And again it was Jake Hilleary's climax running and passing and Buck Herrlein's terrific pokes at the line that paced the Raiders.

Fumble Aids Raiders

One of numerous Roosevelt fumbles, a bobble by Bernie Kolker midway of the second quarter, gave the Raiders their first chance. The ball was on Roosevelt's 16 when Hal Mitchell raced in to recover. Three passes by young Clarence Kuldell fell wide of their targets and then Hilleary took over. He swung a hard one at Johnny Lumpkin on the goal and all the latter had to do was fall down. Herrlein made it 7-0 with a line buck.

Twice more the boys in red struck in the third quarter before Roosevelt got its only score. Setting up the first goal, Hilleary sneaked in to take a pass from Hymie Perlo on the Western 30 and wasn't brought down by Breier until he had reached the Rider 35. A long pass and long run by Hilleary advanced the ball to the 4 and Herrlein went over in one try. Hilleary passed to Ballard for the point.

Second Score Easy

The second touchdown in the third quarter was a simple matter. Hilleary scooped up Kolker's punt on the opposition's 35, ran it back to the 23, and went over from the 16-yard stripe after Herrlein had made 9 yards through the line. The latter was stopped in his attempted plunge for the point.

Roosevelt's lone points came a few seconds later. Taking the kickoff on his own 38, Kolker, usually a rusher, passed three times to Les Wicklein to move 2 yards beyond midfield. Breier's pass at that point bounced out of a Western defender's arms into those of Substitute Ted Stathopulus on the 30 and the latter raced over with Dick Koester carrying a mile-wide path. Marvin Kogod, a tackle, place-kicked the point.

Foes Couldn't Stop

Though it sent a total of 24 men into action, Western couldn't stop scoring. Bobby Leach, first baseman of the Raider baseball team, accounted for another touchdown as the fourth period got under way when he leaped into the air, twisted crazily, and grabbed Hilleary's 20-yard aerial over the goal. The game's final points were credited to Herrlein after Western had marched 50 yards with four downs. Buck hit the line from the 4 and Hilleary's placement was perfect.

2,000 Fans Witness 13-to-0 Victory as Russ Arnaud Stars

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 11.—Russ Arnaud, Washington and Lee High's great halfback of Arlington, led his team to a 13-to-0 victory over James Monroe High here this afternoon to knock the Fredericksburg team out of the running for the mythical northern Virginia high school grid championship. A crowd of 2,000 persons witnessed the game.

The championship will be decided on Thanksgiving Day in Alexandria when Washington and Lee meets George Washington High. The latter eleven defeated the Fredericksburgers in the season's opener.

Arnaud counted for both of the W.-L. touchdowns, scoring in the third period and again in the fourth. The initial six points were made when he crashed through from the 4-yard line after Decelle had set the pace by romping 30 yards from his own 47 to the Fredericksburgers' 17.

In the fourth, the little Generals set up their second scoring spree from the 47-yard line of the Fredericksburgers, Arnaud taking the ball over from the 3-yard stripe. Ray Shepherd's placement was good for the extra point.

Washington and Lee's second string was on the way to another touchdown in the late minutes of the fourth period when the whistle cut them short on the 1-yard line. Outstanding in the latter drive was Fon Montgomery.

The Fredericksburgers made only one real threat, that in the third period when they advanced to the Little Generals' 9-yard stripe. Here a pass interception cut short their progress.

While Arnaud was easily the best thing the visitors presented, outstanding ball was played for Fredericksburg by Branscome, Snellings, Brame and Brown.

skirted end from the six to climax a 42-yard sustained drive, and the second was earned as reserve End Willie Wixted flopped on a fumble by Barrett over the goal line. This last Georgetown touchdown was set up by one of the few breaks of the game that fell Georgetown's way.

Mazer had fumbled on the Georgetown 34 and the ball was recovered by Wixted, a senior, who was playing by far the best game of his career for the Hoyas.

The ugly sound of the officials' horn nullified three Georgetown touchdowns.

One of the voided Hilltop touchdowns was scored by 240-pound tackle and shotput champion Al Blozis who plucked a Waynesburg fumble from the air and sped 55 yards. Another was on a long pass, Koshlap to Ghecas. Both of these plays happened in the fourth quarter. In the first period, with the score at 6-6, Koshlap had passed 16 yards to end Mike Kopcik for an apparent touchdown only to have the ball called back and a 15-yard holding penalty inflicted against Georgetown.

Crimson Wave Takes 19-0 Victory to Keep League Slate Clean

Special Dispatch to The Post

Alexandria, Oct. 11.—Petersburg High School's Crimson Wave surged over a lethargic George Washington High School eleven before 4,000 fans here tonight to maintain its undefeated record with a 19-0 victory in its first Virginia Class A. Conference contest of the season. It was the Wave's third consecutive victory.

After being held scoreless in the first period, the Wave scored early in the second quarter after George Washington had halted an earlier threat at the 8-yard line. Taking the ball on the G. W. 35, after the Presidents kicked out from the end zone, the visitors clicked off two consecutive first downs and scored when Vernon Bryant plunged over from the 2-yard line. Jimmie O'Donnell kicked the extra point.

A 15-yard pass from Fred Bowman to Jimmie Smith netted the second score in the third quarter and O'Donnell again converted to make it 14-0. A pass interference penalty that gave the Wave the ball on the 2-yard line set up the final touchdown in the last quarter and Bryant hit pay dirt from the 6-inch mark after G. W. held the first two thrusts.

The entire game was played in G. W. territory and the losers never crossed the midfield strip. The Presidents made only 1 first down to 11 for the visitors.

Little Hoyas Tied, 0-0, At Charlotte Hall

Frank Cady Sparks Cadets With 60-Yard Sprint in First Appearance With Eleven

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 11.—Staving off a last-minute Georgetown Prep scoring bid and narrowly missing scoring itself in the last 30 seconds when Halfback Frank Cady got away for a 60-yard gallop, an underdog Charlotte Hall Military Academy football team held Georgetown Prep to a 0-0 deadlock here this afternoon.

Charlotte Hall, after having pushed the Little Hoyas deep into their own territory three times, was forced back to its own 11-yard line with but one minute of play remaining. After three passes by Jack Ghecas into the end zone had failed to connect, Ghecas went back to attempt a field goal.

The attempted kick fell far short, and Cady gathered the ball into his arms and headed for the Georgetown goal line. Eluding all but one tackler, the Cadet star ran to the Georgetown 40 before Bill McChesney pulled him down. The game ended one play later.

Charlotte Hall drove to the Little Hoya 18 in the first period, only to be repulsed. After a drive from midfield in the second quarter, the Cadets went to the Georgetown 7-yard line as the first half ended.

Early in the fourth period, Charlotte Hall, sparked by brilliant running by Cady and Ernie Bowersox, penetrated to the Little Hoya 14 before being stopped.

Cady, former St. John's great, making his Cadet debut here today, was the whole show for the Cadet eleven, ably abetted by Al Sondheimer and Ernie Bowersox. Hurt in the second period, Cady came back to run the Little Hoyas almost into the ground during the second half.

Young Cadets And Virginia Freshmen Tie

Penalty Robs V. M. I. Of Late Score; Teams Fight Even Battle

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 11.—The freshman teams of Virginia and Virginia Military Institute fought to a scoreless tie in Scott Stadium this afternoon.

Honors were even throughout the first half, with neither goal being seriously threatened, but in the last two quarters play was almost entirely in Virginia territory. Aided by a heavy line, the young Keydets twice launched determined drives which all but suceeded.

The first came midway the third period when a 25-yard pass to Mattern placed the ball on Virginia's 45. Easterly lateraled to Seay for a first down, and Seay shot another pass to Stevens, good for 15 yards. A touchdown was averted, however, when Edward Steckmesser, Virginia tackle, recovered a fumble on the 7-yard stripe.

A sterling trio of Cadet backs, Arthur Seay, Virginia's Stell and Harry Easterly, combined short line plunges and end runs in the final period to rush the ball to Virginia's 8-yard mark, but there the ball was lost on downs.

The Keydets rolled up nine first downs in the second-half drives, while Virginia failed to amass that many during the entire game.

A penalty for interference robbed the visitor of a touchdown in the final minutes of the second quarter. Ducko, substitute end, grabbed a 50-yard pass and raced across the goal line but the play was not allowed.

Followers Give Navy Even Chance to Turn Tide on Princeton

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Oct. 11.—Enthusiasm second only to that which prevails on the eve of an Army-Navy engagement pervades the regiment of midshipmen and the naval contingent in general tonight in view of tomorrow's big contest between Princeton and Navy in Palmer Stadium, Princeton, N. J.

Shortly after today's final practice, the regiment held a rally in front of Bancroft Hall. The academy band was on hand and played a number of stirring pieces, and several members of the coaching staff and high ranking officers addressed the gathering.

For the last few days confidence of a Navy victory has been steadily growing and tonight Middie followers feel that the Middies have perhaps a little better than an even chance of overcoming the Tigers. As far as the players are concerned they are on their toes to erase the humiliation of the 28-to-0 reverse of last year, one of the largest scores that has marked the long series between the rival institutions.

Princeton and Navy have been clashing off and on since back in 1885. In the early years of the series the games were called "second-team contests." Of the 38 games played during the 54 years, Princeton has won 16, Navy 6, and 6 resulted in deadlocks. The Tars have not tested victory since 1931, when they won, 15 to 0. Since then their best efforts brought a scoreless deadlock in 1932, and a 13-to-13 draw in 1938.

A brisk signal and formation drill constituted today's final workout for the Tars, and the several kickers also came in for a share of attention.

In spite of the fact that Capt. Dick Foster, end, and Johnny Harrell, powerful quarter and blocking back, and two or three other regulars will not be available for service because of injuries, Navy is nevertheless ready to throw a powerful force against the Tigers. First, there are two combinations of comparatively equal strength that are expected to alternate, the same as in the two previous games with William and Mary and Cincinnati, and the mentors are happy over the fact that they are well fortified in other replacements, this condition probably being better than in the history of the local gridiron sport.

Although the probable starting lineup was announced tonight, it is just possible that one or two changes may be made. The probable backfield lineup: Ralph Bover, at quarter, Phil Gutting and Cliff Lenz, halfbacks, and Bill Busik, fullback. As to the line, the ends will be Bob Zoeller and Willis Maxson, ends; Ken Steen and Bill Chewning, tackles; Joe Sliwka and Bill Vitucel, guards; Ed Sims, center. Steen will act as captain in the absence of Foster.

Hoya Yearlings Swamp Temple Frosh, 26 to 0

Ben Reiges Completes Nine of 13 Passes For Georgetown

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct. 11.—Georgetown's yearling footballers swamped Temple's freshmen here today, 26 to 0.

With Ben Reiges completing 9 of 13 passes and an alert pass defense turning four intercepted aerials into touchdowns, the Hoyas led all the way.

On the first play of the second period Reiges uncorked a 15-yard spiral to Joe Sikorski, who stepped over for the first tally of the game. Reiges passed to Jack Bowan for the extra point.

Late in the same quarter, Oja intercepted a Baugher pass on the Temple 13 and raced untouched to score. The try for the extra point was blocked.

The running of Joe Gyorgdoak featured the play of the second period, although the Templars managed to move into Hoya territory for only the second time in the game when Ditomo completed a pass to Glowacki that was good for 48 yards. However, another interception broke up the threat.

Gyorgydoak scored his second score on a center slam from the 2-yard stripe and Reiges passed to Yunka for the extra point. Oja again broke up signs of a Temple offensive by returning an intercepted aerial to the Owls' 12 from where three ground plays set up the final score.

Colonials Decided Favorites Over Foes In Homecoming Clash

Special Dispatch to The Post

Staunton, Va., Oct. 11.—George Washington's football stock, rocketing since the Colonials dumped Manhattan in an upset last week, is expected to reach new heights tomorrow when the District eleven meets Washington and Lee at nearby Lexington.

The Colonial squad, numbering 30 players, arrived here tonight by bus from Washington and will remain until noon when they will advance on a town bustling with homecoming activities.

With victories over Mount St. Mary's and Manhattan behind it, George Washington will be a pronounced favorite over the Generals, who have dropped decisions to Vanderbilt and Kentucky since defeating Hampden-Sydney in their opener.

G. W. Coach Reinhart plans no line-up changes, but Coach Tex Tilsen of the Generals may be forced to insert Duke Wadlington at left end in place of Howard Dobbins. It is definite that Perry Simmons will be in the line-up instead of Lillard Aller, right tackle, who was injured in last week's game with Kentucky.

Indians Rout Wilson, 31-6, In Opener

Bob Nolte Figures In All Touchdowns With Passes, Runs Through Tiger Line

An Anacostia High football team composed mostly of young Bob Nolte, a rookie, had no trouble whatever in its first interhigh football game of the year yesterday, smashing Woodrow Wilson eleven, 31-6, on the Southeast gridiron.

Nolte's efforts in the Indians' behalf, summed up, were scoring twice on dashes through the line and passing to the other three Indian touchdowns. His part in Anacostia's single extra point was holding the ball as Schaffer place-kicked.

Straight power plays gave the Indians their first tally in the first period. Nolte capped the drive with a 6-yard plunge through center.

With a second-string line "breathing" regulars, Nolte was still able to find leaks in the Wilson defense. On the third play of the second quarter he found a hole in the right side of the line and after sidestepping the halfback reversed his field and streaked 40 yards to score. An attempted pass by Craig was incomplete for the extra point.

Soon after the kick-off the game was interrupted when Craig, of Anacostia, and Hickerson, of Wilson, were ousted from the game for fighting.

The beginning of the third period saw Nolte take the ball on his own 20 and advance to Wilson's 35. From there a sustained drive was started with Nolte and Spencer taking turns on 15-yard thrusts through guard and center. At the 15-yard stripe Nolte cocked his arm, found Schaffer on the sideline, and the latter took the ball over from the 8-yard line.

A blocked kick by Hoffman gave the Indians their next chance to score. Taking a pass from Nolte on the 19, Hoffman romped over for six points. The placement was blocked by Mudd.

And finally Nolte picked George Absbur out for his receiver to close out Indian scoring for the game. The play was good for a total of 15 yards.

Wilson's only successful scoring effort came a few seconds later. Voight passed to Tanney for 35 yards. Simpich dashed around end for 18 more, and Hollenbeck passed to Riley for the goal from the 20. Hoffman rushed in to block the placement.

Virginia Choice Over Terps Today in Traditional Clash

10,000 Fans Expected for Homecoming

Cavaliers, With Victories Over Lehigh and Yale, Expected to Win

By Jack Munhall

The wounds of its upset 7-6 defeat by Hampden-Sydney having been salted by last week's 51-0 shellacking by Penn, University of Maryland today moves into its third football game of the season a rank underdog to strong Virginia at 2:30 at College Park.

It is Maryland's homecoming game and though the occasion hardly will be a joyous one in view of the Terrapins' poor record, a crowd of more than 10,000 is expected for the seventeenth renewal of an old and traditional series.

Virginia and Maryland first played in 1919 when Maryland was known as Maryland State. Maryland State won that game, 13-0, and the two rivals didn't play again until 1925, since which time they have met annually. The score of the series favors Maryland, with eight victories, six losses and four ties.

Throughout the years Maryland-Virginia football games have been dog-eat-dog battles. Only twice has one team definitely outclassed the other. In 1926 Virginia walloped Maryland, 21-0, and in 1936 the Terps retaliated with a 20-rout of the Cavaliers. No less than 9 of the 16 games played have been decided by the margin of a touchdown or less. The Cavaliers have captured the last two engagements by 27-19, in 1938, and by 12-7 last season.

Boast Strong Backfield

Today the Cavaliers, bolstered by consecutive victories over Lehigh and Yale, appear to have too many backfield guns for the Terrapins to spike. One of the South's fastest and best-balanced ball-carrying corps will be unloosed against the Old Liners and Maryland's chief hopes, it seems, are to make the game interesting by holding the count to respectable proportions.

Not that the Terps have resigned themselves to defeat. Far from it. They'll be in there pitching until the final out, but they realize the terrific odds confronting them and therefore are not entertaining illusions about their chances.

Of all Virginia's fast-stepping backs a cocky sophomore speedster named Ed (Flash) Bryant probably will command the most attention.

For Bryant, a "scat" halfback who dotes on broken field running, is touted as one of the hottest young prospects to grace Dixieland in many a moon. In his first varsity game, two weeks ago against Lehigh, the slender youngster streaked to 2 consecutive touchdowns of more than 50 yards on punt returns.

Other outstanding Cavalier backs are Bill Dudley and Mosby Cardozo, alternate quarterbacks, and Harry McLaughtery and Frank Neustedter, who do most of the blocking.

Maryland will present a slightly revised line-up. Don Shockey, a hard-hitting sophomore, will be in the fullback slot instead of Bernie Ulman, who is laid low with streptococcus of the throat. Luther Conrad will be at left end in place of Leo Mueller, and Reginald Vincent will supplant big Bill Krouse at left tackle. Both of these changes have been made to inject more speed into the Maryland line.

Maryland's biggest hope for an upset is vested in the slim shanks of Quarterback Joe Murphy, 150 pounds of lightning speed, who may at any time go all the way, and who is one of the best punters in local gridiron circles. Murphy's booming punts, especially his quick kicks, may play an important role in restricting the size of Virginia's victory margin—if any.

Del Rio Pin Team Loses To Baltimore

11-Stick Defeat Suffered in Match At Convention Hall

Herb Sach's Del Rio duckpinners were on the short end of a close 11-pin decision with the Baltimore Recreation sharpshooters last night at Convention Hall, but before the evening was over had scored victories in singles and doubles over the invading Orioles.

The Baltimore stars led by Nova Hamilton's 419 set, came through in the final frame of the last game to grab the team match 1,832 to 1,821. Del Rio with 644 took a 29-pin lead in the first game, but dropped 18 pins behind after the second game with counts of 628 to 581. In the final skirmish the Del Rios lost, 596 to 589. Harry Hilliard was high for the losers with 413.

Tony Santini had little trouble annexing the singles, 381 to 360, from Howard Parsons, a former Capital star.

Astor Clarke and Hokie Smith had respective sets of 412 and 383 to handily trim Hamilton and Winfield Guerke by a score of 795 to 744 in the doubles.

The Adjudication 2 quintet crashed through to team honors with 565 for game and 1,619 for set, splitting the league leadership with Receiving and Control 2 with 14-4.

Cards Favored 7-5 Today Over St. Anselm's

Catholic U. Holds a Light Drill on Eve of Game at Manchester

Manchester, N. H., Oct. 11.—Invading New Hampshire for the first time in its history, a Catholic University grid squad went through a brief workout here this afternoon preparatory to its Columbus Day clash with St. Anselm College.

Indian summer temperature prevailed today and Coach "Dutch" Bergman's 29-man squad was limited to light exercises at one of the city's playgrounds. The weather man has predicted cool and clear weather for the game and a capacity throng of 12,000 is expected to turn out.

The visiting coach said tonight the same line-up that started the Detroit game a week ago would take the field tomorrow with every man in top condition. St. Anselm may face the opening whistle minus the services of Ernie Frechette, 200-pound guard who sustained an ankle injury in the Scranton University game last week.

Local odds installed Catholic University a 7-5 favorite to avenge a 39-13 defeat last year that marred an undefeated season. A lack of depth in linemen is expected to lead up to St. Anselm's defeat, although six of the seven starters played the full 60 minutes in the 20-19 loss to Scranton.

both playing safe of the ditch in 2 and on the fifteenth the eventual winner played a great long-iron shot within a club's length of the pin and dropped the putt for a par 4 and a dormie 3-hole lead.

Mrs. Sloman Wins

Mrs. Meckley's drive caught the trees on the sixteenth, but when they both reached the green in three, Mrs. Sloman putted well past the cup. She was careful of the return putt, lined it up and knocked it in for the victory.

Mrs. Sloman needed par for an 81 at the finish, while her opponent was three strokes higher.

Mrs. H. J. Simons won the second flight, Mrs. Kurtz Hanson the third and Mrs. R. Thornburg the fourth. Among the consolation winners were Miss Houghton, Lillian Wood, Mrs. Woodlief Thomas and Mrs. R. T. Schlossberg. Miss Wood was out in 39 for the best nine holes of the day. Mrs. Thornburg required only 11 putts on her first nine against Mrs. Hoene.

Mrs. Sloman will default in the medal playoff this morning, and Mrs. Leo Walper, Mrs. T. E. Schluderberg and Elizabeth Houghton will play off Monday's original four-way medal tie at 9:30.

Trinity Presents Show Today at Upperville

Horse Event to Be Well Filled With Full Card; Pageant Is Feature of 16 Classes; 'Selling Class' Also Listed

By Anne Hagner

What is tradition to the Trinity Horse Show is brand-new stuff to many show followers—which is the reason that the famed show grounds at Upperville, Va., will be well filled today with both exhibitors and spectators, always welcomers of the unusual.

Beginning at 9:30 this morning, the Trinity committee will produce a full card of 16 classes that are, for the most part, departures from run-of-the-mill shows.

Most popular with hunt country fans is the pageant, which this year is featuring patriotic subjects taken from American history. Nearly every attic in the vicinity has been ransacked to provide costumes for the participants, who may enter the ring on foot, mounted or in a vehicle.

Another unusual event is the "selling class," open to any mount valued at $1,000 or less. Prices that will be accepted are included in the program, and every entrant must be sold to the first bidder who offers the required amount. Owners making sales as a result of the class will turn over 5 per cent of the purchase price to the show committee.

Most of the regular events emphasize the value of horses kept primarily for hunting, and not for show purposes, although conformation classes occupy an important part of the prize list.

Classes are for mares suitable to produce hunters, 2-year-olds, children's ponies, green hunters under saddle, thoroughbred hunters, half-bred hunters, heavy draft pulling contest, handicap hunters, bona-fide hunters, ladies' hunters, half-century class for riders over 50 years, hunters under saddle, selling class, corinthian, hunt teams, and the pageant, which is set for 3:30 p. m. and winds up the program.

The committee is headed by Charles V. B. Cushman and Taylor Hardin. Other members are Joshua Fletcher, Hubert Phipps, Robert Fletcher, and H. Rozier Dulany, jr.

Sandell to Direct 'Y' Swimming Team

Ralph W. Foster, director of physical education at the Central Y. M. C. A., announced yesterday that during the absence of Coach Robert F. Campbell, now on active military duty at the University of Maine, George Sandell will direct the activities of the men's swimming team during the coming season. Sandell is a former team member as well as a veteran of local and midwestern competition.

Forming the neucleus of this year's team are such seasoned swimmers as Gordon Mustin, formerly of Yale University; Ernie Boggs, perennial District backstroke champion; free stylers John Fielder, Al Hamm, Val Bauer and Russell Bishop, and divers Johnny Marshall and Conrad Kreps. Harold Hines will continue as manager.

Cuba to Enter Jumping Class At Garden

Success of National Horse Show Assured With Foreign Stars

Cuba will send a jumping team to compete in the nightly international military jumping contests at the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden, New York, it was announced yesterday by Amory L. Haskell, president.

With the Chilean mounts already stabled at Governors Island, and the Mexican horses expected daily, the traditional color and ceremony of the National are virtually assured.

Appearance of foreign teams in the show was a matter for considerable conjecture up until a few weeks ago, as the precarious state of world affairs made it seem likely that South American officers would be needed at home.

Sail on First Trip

The Cubans sailed from Havana yesterday on the ship Oriente. It is their first trip to the Garden since 1938.

In the meantime, five Mexican army officers, headed by Maj. Armando Villarreal, are also en route to New York. Also on the team are Capt. Ramiro Palafox, the full-blooded Indian, who starred in both the 1939 and 1939 Nationals; Capt. Joaquin Chagoya, a member of the outfit in 1938, and Capt. Humberto Mariles and Capt. Miscael Ponco, both riders for Mexico here last year.

During the show, Capt. Mariles, on Resorte, captured the Bowman Challenge Trophy, the most sought-after award on the brilliant opening night. Five nights later Capt. Palafox won the Whitney Stone Challenge Trophy for the second successive year.

Representing Chile will be three officers who are familiar figures to Washington show enthusiasts, after their spectacular performances in the inter-American events here several years ago. They are headed by Maj. Eduardo Yanez, who was a particular favorite with local spectators.

With him will be Capt. Pelayo Izurieta, Capt. Armando Fernandez, and Capt. Armando Abarzua, who is the only member of the quartet who has already arrived in New York. He has charge of the conditioning of the team's nine horses, rounding them into top shape to begin schooling as soon as the other officers arrive.

Chilena, veteran equine Chilean representative, will be making her sixth Madison Square Garden appearance. The mare has traveled a total of over 60,000 miles between Santiago, in her native land, and New York.

Goalie Offered Pilot's Job

D. C. Runners To Compete In Marathon

Montague, Clark to Represent Washington A. A. at Port Chester

Washington Athletic Association will be represented by two runners in today's seventeenth annual Port Chester, N. Y., marathon, won last year by the late Pat Dengis, of Baltimore. The distance is 26 miles, 385 yards.

Jimmy Montague, who seems to improve with age, will keep intact his record of participating in every event since the marathon was started in 1923, and Haskell Clark will be appearing in his second race there. Montague has finished in every appearance, while Clark, in his last race, placed twenty-eighth in 1928.

Favorite in the race will be Bill Heincke, of Shanahan A. C., Philadelphia, who was runner-up last year to Dengis, who was killed several months ago in an automobile accident. Clark won the July 24th marathon here.

Washington Gun Club Invades Sykesville

Members of the Washington Gun Club will travel to Sykesville, Md., for a 10-man team match with the Carroll County Gun Club today. There is no program slated for the local traps, but they will be available for those who want to get in some practice.

Honey Cloud Wins Laurel Feature Under Drive

A. J. Abel's Favorite Pays $3.50 Mutuel

Gelding Scores Over Thorn Apple by Neck; 9,000 Fans Witness Day's Card

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 11—Honey Cloud, the gelding which Trainer A. J. Abel plucked out of the claiming ranks and sent on to major stake victories, made good the hard way for the favorite players in the featured Lisbon Purse. Backed into odds-on favoritism in a sprint field that drew seven starters, the High Cloud—Honey Pot gelding had to be placed to a strong hand ride in the stretch to salvage first money by a neck.

George D. Widener's Thorn Apple, recent winner here, proved a formidable pacemaker and it was only in the final jumps that Honey Cloud was able to dispose of the game, 3-year-old daughter of Jamestown—Last Straw and the judges made sure by consulting the photograph. A half-length behind Thorn Apple came A. B. Pierce's Panoramscope to be third.

Winner Pays $3.50

Honey Cloud carried a $3.50 price tag. The track's clocker hung time of 1:14 for the six furlongs but private clockers placed the figure a second faster. The running surface was in fast condition and a crowd of 9,000 saw the battle under perfect conditions.

Thorn Apple broke fifth but Apprentice Madden hurried her along until she got to the front. The Widener filly opened a good lead with Honey Cloud close up. Jockey Mora, on the ultimate winner, appeared to be riding confidently. He expected Thorn Apple to drop back to him but the filly stuck to her guns in the stretch.

When it was necessary, Mora went into a strong hand ride and it was well that he did for Honey Cloud barely was able to get up. Panoramscope raced wide most of the way and came with good energy in the final test.

Small Daily Double

Daily double stock, sky-high here yesterday, dropped to a $37.80 payoff today. Well-played horses figured in the key races.

Crack Flavor, a $4.20 favorite, won the first race in a driving finish. County Cork was second and Leonardtown was third. High Bud carried the leaders wide entering the stretch. Leonardtown crossed the wire along the outside fence and the camera was unable to get him in the picture. An announcement to this effect was made after the race. The judges' decision was final and the chart makers agreed with the officials.

Agnes Knight, owned by Mrs. O. B. Wearley, of Washington, won the third race and completed the double under a good ride by Jockey R. Bernhardt of half-mile fame. The boy whipped the mare into the decision approaching the finish line. Officiate was second and Kai-Min was third. Agnes Knight paid $8.90 in her own right.

ROYAL TEDDY, sluggish early and taken wide for racing room after a half, came with good energy under strong handling to be driving out at end. POLLENATOR set pace along with SCROOGE and drew out when latter stopped, but was no match for winner. BLAZING HEAT closed gamely. CANDLE ENDS reached serious contention early on outside and faded in stretch run.

Selections at Laurel.

Dear Al:

This track offers the best program of the Maryland fall season today with the first twin feature card of the meeting. The line-up is a worthy one for the combination of Columbus Day and Saturday and upwards of 18,000 fans are expected. The weatherman says fair and Warmer, so you better get out early. While it carries $5,000 added to the $7,500 added of the Laurel Mile, the Maryland Futurity probably is the most interesting of the two stakes. Favoritism in the field of 16 named for the 6-furlong sprint promises to center on A. G. Vanderbilt's New World, winner of the Grand Union Stakes at Saratoga and fourth in the Belmont Futurity. However, New World will draw opposition from some up-and-coming juveniles of Maryland breeding. The Laurel is an open race with the choice likely to be J. E. Widener's Roman. With an eight-race card, including a steeplechase, it looks like a big day on the Baltimore-Washington Boulevard. Roy Waldron, trainer of the Milky Way Farm stable of Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, of Chicago, leaves tonight for Pulaski, Tenn., to break a number of the Mars' yearlings. He will be back here Wednesday. Mrs. Elmer Trueman, prominent Washington owner, reports the purchase of Gino Beau, a 3-year-old, and Flo Beau, a 2-year-old, from the estate of Willis Sharpe Kilmer. Maurice (Moose) Peters plans to leave for California at the close of the Laurel meeting, to take a short vacation and then resume saddle activity during the winter season on the West Coast. Mrs. Lucy Normile, wife of Owner-Trainer F. J. Normile, gave birth to a 7½-pound boy at Franklin Square Hospital. Jockey Lucas Dupps, injured in a spill in New England, is taking treatments from Dr. George Bennet, of Johns Hopkins Hospital, and will continue these for five weeks, prior to leaving for Florida and a period of convalescence. Howard (Red) Crawford has taken over the books of Jockeys Eddie Smith and F. A. Smith for the meeting. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Clingendall registered a popular score in his last outing and still retains his edge though moving up. Sock also won recently in the off going and should the strip become muddy would rate as a keen contender. Purcellville has speed and is not overmatched.

Second race—Baffler was an easy winner when competing against similar company in his last race and is favored to repeat. Santi Quaranti quit badly when heavily backed running with Broadside King. He has a chance if he lasts. Greenwich Time beat platers in New York.

Third race—Sun Galomar was no match for Solatium and Swami in his last but meeting maidens of a cheaper variety today, he rates top figure. Pompier has been knocking close in New England races and looms as the principal threat. Russell McGee could surprise.

Fourth race—Skin Deep was second in New York to the speedy sprinter Straw Hat in fast time. He appears capable of disposing of Equistar. The latter displayed excellent form at Chicago this fall and will be the one to beat. Royal Edit hails from the consistent Milky Way stable.

Fifth race—New World appears to have the Maryland Futurity at his mercy after the brilliant form demonstrated against the best juveniles in New York this summer. Fair Hero was short in his last and didn't care for the muddy going. Hardy Bud is favored to handle the others.

Sixth Race—Masked General rates a slight edge in The Laurel after his promising third to Challeden at Havre de Grace. A stake winner of distinction, he has the class to win here. Roman stopped going a shorter route last out and is not expected to hold his lead, despite a considerable drop in weight. Pictor is a factor to be reckoned with.

Seventh Race—Blacant, beaten a fraction of a length by Dulle last start, should prefer the longer route of today's contest. He has speed and has a record of consistency. Tyr is the class horse of the race, but his best speed has been sadly lacking in late races. Part One may up to his best effort.

Eighth race—Black Grouse took the measure of Sir Reg and Wild-mute several weeks ago at Havre and the veteran appears capable of repeating in this company should his underpinning still be sound. Golden Vein displayed good form at Havre, but his recent Laurel effort was dull. Jolly Flag should show.

Best bet—New World.

H. E. Foreman Made Director Of Contractors

Succeeds E. J. Harding As Manager of National Construction Group

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Herbert E. Foreman, of Washington, has been appointed managing director of the Associated General Contractors of America, it was announced yesterday by President H. B. Zachry. Mr. Foreman succeeds Edward J. Harding, who died last Saturday. James D. Marshall succeeds Mr. Foreman as assistant managing director.

Mr. Foreman has been assistant managing director of the association since 1934 and has been a member of the staff since 1929. Mr. Marshall has been manager of the heavy construction and railroad contracting division since 1934 and is secretary of the labor relations committee.

Before his appointment as assistant managing director, Mr. Foreman had been field secretary and assistant engineer of the association. He is a native of Dayton, Ohio. After his graduation from Ohio State University in 1919 with a degree of bachelor of civil engineering, he taught for a year at the university. He received his bachelor of law degree in 1929 from Franklin University. He is a member of the Ohio State Bar Association and the Columbus Bar Association.

Mr. Marshall was manager of the Associated General Contractors of Minnesota, Minn., for eight years before coming to Washington. Previously he had been associated with the Northwestern Electric Equipment Co., St. Paul, and had served as vice president or president of subsidiary companies.

Greatest volume of modernization and repair loans for any quarter since movable equipment became ineligible was insured by the Federal Housing Administration in the months of July, August and Septmeber, Stewart McDonald reports.

For the third quarter of 1940, Title I loans reported for insurance numbered 191,927 and amounted to $81,565,337. This amount is 12 per cent greater than the best previous quarter since 1935. It is only 5.4 per cent less than the record amount of $86,355,874 reported in the last quarter of that year, when certain types of movable equipment as well as loans up to $50,000 were eligible and when there was no charge for Title I insurance. The maximum loan is now $2,500.

According to Mr. McDonald, this quarter's record volume of Title I business indicates that the current year should be the best 12 months for modernization since FHA was established, as the last quarter usually is the largest.

Business conditions in Washington showed no change on October 1 from the index for September 1, according to the monthly survey of 147 trading areas of the United States conducted by Brooke, Smith, French & Dorrance, Inc., advertising concern. As of October 1 the city's business index stood at exactly normal, the same as for September 1. On October 1, 1939 the city's business index stood at 2 per cent below normal.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 11 (AP).—A quick upturn of wheat prices, characteristic of frequent similar sudden advances the past few weeks, today carried the blackboard quotation on December futures delivery up as much as 1½ cents to 84¼, highest of any contract in four months.

Deferred deliveries followed with corresponding gains, May equaling the season's high, and despite profit taking at the last closing prices were ¾ to 1¼ cents higher than yesterday, with December 81⅞@84 and May 82¾@82⅞.

Technical scarcity of commercial supplies of wheat as well as corn was the fundamental factor in the market, traders said, although strength in securities attracted attention. Corn closed ⅞ to 1¼ higher, December 58⅛, May 60¾; oats ⅛ to ½ up; soy beans 1¼ to 1½ higher; rye ¼ to ½ up and lard unchanged to 7 higher.

The official crop report, increasing estimates of domestic wheat, corn and oats production, had little market effect inasmuch as the slight gains were about in line with expectations, but total supplies of these three grains, including carryover, are expected to be larger than last year.

Corn closed near the best level of the day, with December contracts the highest since July. Sale of 197,000 bushels to exporters, accepting for some time as hedges, was offset by bookings of 225,000 bushels to arrive. Spot prices were ⅛ to ¾ higher, with No. 1 yellow quoted up to 60½ and white to 71½.

A sharp reduction in the official estimate of soy bean production stimulated buying in that pit at times, but profit taking following yesterday's upturn and tempering of any prices unsettling the market. No. 3 yellow old beans sold at 78¼@77¼, compared with 78¼ yesterday.

Lard was strengthened by activity of hogs and grains.

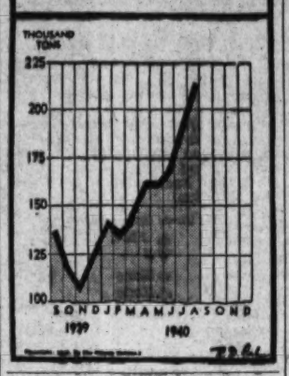
London Stocks

London, Oct. 11 (AP).—The stock market overcame starting hesitancy today and closed with prices pointing higher. Trading was restricted, however, as the fellow-ship of the possibilities inherent in the new war moves in the Balkans and the Far East. Kaffirs sharply reversed an early down trend when local support developed to absorb Cape Town offerings.

Fair support came through for British government bonds and gains extended to around ¼ point. In the foreign bond market recent weakness in Japanese loans was checked when bargain hunters nibbled at a few issues. Leading industrials, where changes were mostly higher. Oils and domestic rails hewed to a narrow price course.

Stocks of Crude Rubber Since Outbreak of the War



U. S. Dollars Flood Swiss Mart; Price Breaks Sharply

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 11 (AP).—The United States dollar dropped sharply today as European hoarders unloaded bank notes on a flooded market. Banks gave 4.03 Swiss francs for a $1 bill compared with 5.80 last May when Germany began her offensive against the Low Countries.

Hoarders then gladly paid 6 Swiss francs per dollar, but there were few buyers at the current quotation and sellers took heavy losses. Financial sources said the unloading was caused by public fears the United States might enter the war or block all continental accounts. Switzerland is still an international banking center and much of Europe's financial business is cleared through the little neutral nation.

(In New York the Swiss franc was priced at 23.18 U. S. cents, highest since early 1936. The price has risen steadily in the last month as Swiss money originally sent to the United States for safekeeping was brought back.

Building Activity In September Tops 1939 by 15.3%

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—A larger-than-expected gain in building activity throughout the Nation during September was reported today by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc.

The mercantile agency found building certificates issued in 315 cities during the month totaled $118,961,971, a gain of 2.3 per cent over $116,360,070 in August, and contrasted with the usual drop of 10 per cent between those months. The figure was 15.3 per cent higher than the $103,303,666 of September, 1939.

Percentage gains over September, 1939, recorded in the various sections of the country were as follows: New England, 78.2; South Atlantic, 44.2; East Central, 11.7; West Central, 9.6; Mountain, 48.9; Pacific, 53.2. There were declines in only two sections, Middle Atlantic, by 11.4 per cent, and South Central, by 13.2 per cent.

Week's New Issues Reach Peak for Yera

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Public offerings of new securities during the week ended yesterday, totaling $211,825,406, were the greatest for any week in more than a year, Poor's Publishing Co. said today.

Included were $108,000,000 of Southern California Edison Co. bonds and $60,000,000 of New York City obligations, the largest corporate and municipal issues, respectively, of the year to date.

New capital recruited was relatively small, however, accounting for only 7 per cent of the week's offerings.

Western Union Earnings Show Sharp Upturn

Net of $1,854,086 This Year Contrasts With 1939 Loss

Western Union Telegraph yesterday reported for the eight months ended August 31 net income of $1,854,086, equal to $1.77 a share on capital stock. This compares with a net loss of $303,680 in the like period of 1939.

Net profit in August this year totaled $270,838, against net of $178,229 in same 1939 month.

President R. B. White said that the upward trend in Western Union's domestic revenues was continuing in line with the rising level of the country's general business activity.

Contailer Corporation

Container Corporation of America reported net profit for the quarter ended September 30 of $800,917, equal to $1.03 a share, compared with $283,060, or 32 cents a share, for the like 1939 period. Department Store Sales Hold Firm During October

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated today that department store sales increased 1 per cent during the first week of October, compared with the corresponding week last year.

Sales in the week ended September 28 were unchanged from a year ago, while for the four weeks ended October 5, sales were 5 per cent higher than for the corresponding 1939 weeks.

Comparisons of sales in the one week ended October 5 with a year ago by Federal Reserve districts follow:

Increases—Boston, 1 per cent; Philadelphia, 7; Richmond, 1; Atlanta, 6; Chicago, 6; St. Louis, 12; Kansas City, 5, and Dallas, 7.

December—Cleveland 1 per cent; Minneapolis, 31, and San Francisco, 1.

New York sales were unchanged from a year ago. The board noted that the Minneapolis report was affected by the differences in date of a special sale in 1939 and 1940.

Britain, Argentina Weigh Trade Pact

Buenos Aires, Oct. 10 (AP).—Commercial cables said today representatives of Great Britain and Argentina were discussing the possibility of Britain buying between £35,000,000 and £40,000,000 of Argentine products, making payment with Argentine bonds now held in England. Government circles declined comment.

Such a deal (involving between $100,000,000 and $160,000,000 at the current rate of exchange) would tend to relieve the economic strain on Argentina as a result of blocking Argentine export balances in England under war decrees.

(The Foreign Bondholders Protective Council at New York said their records showed that at the end of 1939 Great Britain held approximately £54,034,654 of Argentine obligations, or about $217,000,000.)

New York Dry Goods

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—Brisk demand continued in woolen piece goods, with prices for men's wear tending higher. Popular items of the gray goods were in demand at firm prices. Silks remained quiet, while scattered commitments were made for spun rayon and acetate blends for spring trade.

Selective Rally Is Led by Steel Issues; Axis Bonds Rise Sharply; Key Staples Strong

New York, Oct. 11 (AP).—After seven successive do-nothing sessions the stock market today put on a quiet and selective rally under leadership of steels and other industrials.

Trends were indefinite in a forenoon of lazy going. There was a brief flurry after midday when gains of fractions to more than a point were well distributed. The pace then slowed and closing prices were well under the best in most cases.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks finished with a net upturn of .3 of a point at 44, the first plus mark registered by the composite since October 2. Transfers totaled 404,250 shares, compared with 382,570 the day before.

Part of the day's purchasing was attributed by analysts to the belief of technical students the market was due for at least a temporary revival because of its lengthy stalemate. In addition, brokers said, boardrooms seemed a bit more cheerful regarding politics, business and the further lessening of worries over the recent rift in American-Japanese relations.

The tendency to keep commitments relatively light, on the other hand, was blamed on the fact that an extra-long week-end was approaching—markets will be closed tomorrow for Columbus Day—lack of any real knowledge as to what Hitler is up to in the Balkans and fears for results of the persistent air duels between the British and Nazis.

Among helpful influences were: Forecasts next week's steel mill operations would hold at high levels and announcement of the American Iron & Steel Institute producers would be able to take care of private and defense requirements with present facilities; another jump in this week's automotive output and reports of increasing sales of new cars; a sharp decrease during September of existing stocks of domestic copper, and estimates of sustained year-to-year gains in retail store activities.

Crucible Steel preferred, the new issue appearing on the ticket tape for the first time yesterday, was up 5 points, and the common stock 2¼. Lesser advances were retained by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, American Airlines, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, Great Northern, American Woolen preferred, Distillers Corporation, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Sperry, Wright-Aeronautical and Texas Corporation.

In the Curb, Aluminum of America exhibited strength on the company's plans for a $150,000,000 defense building expansion. Minor gains were shown for Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal and Creole Petroleum. Volume here was around 76,000 shares against 77,000.

Japanese dollar loans moved sharply upward in the bond market and German issues also turned in gains. For the Nipponese obligations, uptrends were partial recovery from recent sharp losses, Japanese 6½s closed at 66, up 5, and the 5½ at 48¾ were ahead 1¾. Taiwan Electric Power 5½s of '71 at 40 added 3. Yokohama 6s of '61 at 46 were up 2, while a point ahead were Tokyo City 5½s of '61 at 42¼. German 7s of '49 finished at 19¼, up 1¼, and the 5½s of '65 at 15, up ¼. Down a point or more were Canadian 4s of '60 at 92, Belgium 6½ of '49 at 45, and Brisbane 6s of '50 at 60.

Railway loans led a gentle uptrend among domestic corporate loans and moving into higher territory were Chesapeake & Ohio 3¼s at 101¼, St. Paul 5s of '75 at 5¼, Erie first 4s of '96 at 76¼, Nickel Plate 5½ of '74 "A" at 72, and Southern Railway 4s of '56 at 58¼.

Advances in industrial bonds lifted the Associated Press average of ten industrial issues to a new high for 1940.

Transactions at $6,236,600, face value, compared with $4,851,500 Thursday.

War threats in the Far East and the fast-moving United States defense program provided a backdrop for broad buying of key commodities for spot and future delivery.

Wool top futures at New York jumped 5½ cents a pound for some deliveries coincident with news from Boston of a 5-cents a pound hike in fine grades of spot raw wool. Some grades of spot passed the $1-a-pound mark. The advances were caused by receipt by mills of invitations to bid on 17,000,000 additional yards of materials for Army uniforms.

Rubber futures rose an outside of one-third cent a pound and active demand for virtually all grades of crude rubber developed at prices boosted ⅛ to ¼ cent a pound.

Buyers lifted silk futures 6 to 7½ cents a pound. Another increase in spot raw silk brought the week's gains to around 15 cents a pound. Few offers to sell appeared because holders wished to guard against possible suspension of Japanese shipments.

Copper futures advanced .17 to .27 of a cent a pound in line with an increase in the price of scrap copper and a further decline in refined stocks.

A sudden burst of buying at Chicago lifted wheat futures ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel and brought the December contract to the best level in about four months. Corn rose ⅝ to ¾ of a cent.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities, based on 1926 as 100, advanced to 74.20 from 74.16 Thursday.

Southern Rail Freight Rates Are Reduced

Cuts Range From One To Seven Cents Per Hundred Pounds

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Oct. 11.—The Southern Freight Association announced today that Southern railroads have decided to reduce standard class rates between points in the South for distances up to and including 190 miles.

J. G. Kerr, association chairman, explained this move would give all Southern shippers and receivers the benefit on both interstate and State traffic of class rates recently prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission for application between points in North Carolina.

Reductions in first class rates will range from 1 to 7 cents a 100 pounds. Related changes will be made in other class rates while carload and less than carload rates related by percentage to the first class rates also will be reduced for these distances.

The effective date of the reductions has not been determined.

Blount Guilty Of Threatening Roosevelt

Manufacturer's Son Liable to Five Years Or Fine of $1,000

Edward Blount, 30, pleaded guilty to a charge of threatening to kill President Roosevelt at a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday.

Commissioner Turnage said he fixed Blount's bail at $1,500 on the recommendation of District Attorney Edward M. Curran. Blount is held for grand jury action.

The commissioner said Blount was arrested on a warrant obtained by a Secret Service operative and that Secret Service men at the hearing accused Blount of having told several persons that he would kill the President.

The threats were made at places along the waterfront over a period of months, the commissioner said he was informed at the hearing. Blount himself, Turnage said, made no statement except to murmur "guilty" when he was arraigned.

Turnage said Blount was accompanied at the hearing by his father, Maj. Walter E. Blount, a retired manufacturer, who said his son had been emotionally upset for some time and lately had turned to talking politics.

Blount apparently posted his bond at once, as District jail officials declared there was no record of him there. He is accused of violating the drastic law against threatening the President which was enacted during the World War. If convicted, he would be liable to five years in prison or a $1,000 fine or both.

Gold Shipped From Lisbon Believed Italian, Swiss

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, Oct. 11.—The unofficial reports that both Italy and Switzerland had begun a policy of shipping large quantities of gold bullion to New York, following the failure of the German invasion of England, was given further credence today when a total of more than $8,000,000 in gold arrived on two liners from Lisbon, Portugal.

Because of her store of $6,000,000 in gold from Portugal, the Japanese liner Hakozaki Maru arrived two days late today, having been detained for that period at Bermuda while British authorities sought to determine the origin of her gold shipments, it was reported.

The American Export liner Excambion, arriving today with 197 passengers, also brought more than $2,000,000 in gold from Portugal.

In financial circles here it was reported this evening that both Italy and Switzerland were moving gold through Portugal to New York, and it was emphasized that Portugal, with a gold reserve of only $69,000,000 as of September 1 last, would not have shipped $8,000,000 in that precious metal on two ships unless she feared immediate conquest, which, apparently, she does not fear now. The total exportations of gold from January 1 to August 31 from Portugal was only $26,000,000, financial experts emphasized.

Hope of Averting Pacific Strike Seen

An aide to the National Defense Commission said last night there were "hopeful signs" that there would be no strike of A. F. of L. longshoremen on the Pacific Coast.

Earlier in the day there were reports of a strike threat because the two members of the Labor Board were unable to agree to whether or not there should be a hearing on the question of establishing separate bargaining units for A. F. of L. dock workers at Takoma, Port Angeles and Anacortes in the Northwest. With the two members at odds, there can be no decision until President Roosevelt fills the vacancy created by expiration of Chairman J. Warren Madden's term last August.

They were in Gerona on their way to rejoin their government in London and had slept three nights in the open fields after their permit to travel had been revoked.
